Recommend 27 For Richland Draft Groups

County Committee Submits Names of Business, Professional, Farming Men To Carry Out Government Conscription Law In County.

Twenty-seven Richland countians were recommended today by the county draft committee for appointment to seven draft agencies to handle registration and enrollment of county men under the national conscription law.

They were named to three draft boards, three registrants' advisory boards, one for each of the three draft districts, and to a government appeals agency, consisting of three members, one for each of the draft districts.

Only men were recommended for the 27 posts and all of them are identified prominently with business, professional and farming interests in the city and county. Recommendations were completed shortly after noon today by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston, Probate Judge C. J. Anderson and R. B. Gardner, retiring Ohio American Legion commander, comprising the county draft committee appointed Monday by Gov. John W. Bricker.

The recommendations will be forwarded immediately to Adjt. Gen. Gilson D. Light, head of the Ohio draft set-up, who will submit them to President Roosevelt for final appointment.

Members of the draft committee said they made their recommendations from names suggested by organizations in the city and county. Every attempt was made to exclude men who have sons of eligible age for the draft, commiteeemen said.

Chairmen were recommended for the three five-member draft boards, but the boards themselves will be permitted to give the final approval to the selections.

Suggested for draft board No. 1, including the First, Second, Third, and Fourth wards in Mansfield were:

A. L. Allen, 21 Linden road, chairman; Floyd Dent, 238 Rae avenue; Glenn L. Bierly, 261 Parkway drive; A. E. Courtney, 140 Sherman avenue, and Paul M. Eliot, 41 Bartley avenue.

Recommended for draft board No. 2, (Fifth and Sixth wards and Madison townships) were:

Walter L. Beckley, 135 South Diamond street, chairman; Joseph N. Scanlon, 221 Home avenue; G. L. Draffan, Millsboro road; Eugene Flory, Lexington avenue road, and Fred Miller, 335 Central avenue.

Recommended for appointment to draft board No. 3 (all of the county outside Mansfield and Madison township) were:

Mac Crawford, Shelby, chairman; H. L. Bigbee, Bellville; Vance Clever, Springfield town-

GUARD PRICES

Ohio Retail Merchant Council Hit Sudden Increases.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — The Ohio council of Retail Merchants today launched a campaign to prevent unjustifiable increases in retail prices because of defense activity.

At its 18th annual meeting here yesterday, the council endorsed a program asking merchants to report undue increases in wholesale prices, discourage speculation in inventory stocking, and oppose advertising that misleadingly suggests scarcities.

The 123 merchant association representatives also approved the present system of collecting Ohio sales tax.

Bolton S. Armstrong of Cincinnati was elected president. John W. Udin of Mount Vernon was named a trustee.

CLOSE RESORT

Cleveland Gambling Club Shuts Doors In Investigation.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — The Harvard club, gambling resort in suburban Newburgh Heights, closed today.

It was the second club to shut since the Cuyahoga county grand jury opened an investigation into gambling. The Thomas club in Maple Heights quit business earlier.

The Harvard club often has been the target of law suits by patrons who claimed to have lost their salary and savings gambling there.

ROYAL CORN

Miami Specialist Takes Plane to Trim Windsor's Toe.

MIAMI, Fla — (AP) — Dr. Harry H. Young, Miami chiropodist, left by plane today for Nassau to remove a "bad corn" from the foot of the Duke of Windsor, governor-general of the Bahamas. He said he had been called to Nassau by the duke's aide-de-camp.

BETTMAN HITS AT THIRD TERM

Tells Richland G. O. P. Rally It's Time to End Idea of 'Indispensable Man.'

Hitting the third term candidacy of President Roosevelt, Gilbert Bettman, candidate for judge of the Ohio supreme court, told a crowd of 600 at Richland county Republican headquarters last night that "It is time we put an end to the idea that there is an indispensable man in the White House."

Bettman, former Ohio attorney general, was one of two principal speakers at a rally sponsored by the Willkie-Bricker-Burton club. Congressman George Bender of Cleveland, scheduled for a talk, was unable to be here and sent City Clerk Bannick of Cleveland to speak in his place.

"President Roosevelt is not invincible, as many people think," Bettman said. "When he tried to pack the Supreme court back in 1937 at the height of his popularity, the man in the street who decides elections stopped him, and it can be done again. The attempted assault on the nation's oldest tradition against the third term will fail too."

Discussing the Ohio campaign for governor, Bettman said "the issue between Gov. John W. Bricker and Martin L. Davey is an issue between right and wrong. It is one between tehe honest, straight-forward administration of Gov. Bricker and a Davey administration tainted with hot mix and truckless trucking scandals.

"No man could have appointed the able and honest cabinet Gov. Bricker appointed without having the public welfare and honest government foremost in his mind."

Pointing out that the judicial arm of government "protects our homes and liberties," Bettman

REPORTS TYPHOID CASE IN CITY

Health Commission Says Mansfielder Has Mild Form.

First case of typhoid fever reported in Mansfield this year was under close scrutiny today by health department officials as Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, directed search for source of the infection.

W. H. McClelland, 119 Blymyer avenue, was reported confined with the disease by Dr. Rehder who described his case as a mild form of typhoid.

He said that the disease is communicable. The case has been under observation for two weeks Rehder explained, but laboratory tests had typed it definitely only today.

ABOARD WILLKIE TRAIN ENROUTE CLEVELAND — (AP) — Wendell L. Willkie, declaring that this country now has little influence in international affairs, said today that Germany, Japan and Italy, "are thinking about the United States in terms of war."

(By United Press)

ABOARD THE WILLKIE TRAIN, EN ROUTE TO CLEVELAND — Wendell L. Willkie carried his presidential campaign into Ohio today, warning industrial workers of the east they may be unable to collect social security in their old age unless they remove President Roosevelt from office.

He traveled through the steel and rubber manufacturing centers telling factory workers that "paying social security premiums to a federal government that is year after year increasing its indebtedness and continuing an unbalanced budget is like paying a premium into an insurance company that you know is going into bankruptcy before you get the principal."

Willkie was en route to Cleveland to deliver a major address on foreign affairs in the public auditorium at 9:30 p. m. The address will be broadcast over the Blue network of the National Broadcasting company.

His campaign for Michigan's 19 electorial votes ends today with a brief rear platform address at Adrian, Mich., completing a tour of the automobile country during which some spectators hurled fruits, vegetables, eggs and a wastebasket at the Republican candidate's party but cheers and applause greeted him at almost every stop.

COATS STOLEN

15 Taken From Salesman's Parked Automobile.

City detectives today are investingating the theft of 15 women's coats valued at $617.75 from an automobile parked on Park avenue east last night.

Loss of the coats was reported by Joe Handmacher, Chicago salesman.

Handmacher told police he had parked his car and had gone into Margaret's Inn at about 11 p. m. to get some food. When he returned to the car he found the ventilator window in the rear pried open and the cloth bags containing the coats removed.

Detective Lee J. Remy said he believed the coats had been taken by someone thoroughly familiar with Handmacher's merchandise.

Most of the coats were fur trimmed, some with black fox, Handmacher reported.

Stone Says Strong Army Sure Way to Keep U. S. Out of War

Pledging the American Legion's whole-hearted support of the conscription program, Ralph Stone, of Conneaut, newly-elected state commander, told a gathering of 200 Legion members and their wives at the Legion home last night that the building of a well-trained army was the "surest way to keep America out of war."

Stone spoke following services installing officers of all Richland county Legion posts and auxiliary members last night.

"It took an international emergency to wake up the government, and now it is up to us to see that the government gets all the aid possible in furthering the conscription program," he said.

Stone warned, however, that the building of a large army did not necessarily mean that the United States had to use it for aggression.

Speaking of the huge amounts of propaganda being dumped on the American readers' market, he cautioned legionaires that it was up to them to keep their feet on the ground and heads clear, so that a war of aggression might be avoided.

"In 1917 we were propagandized into the World war and ham-

As County Pays Off Last of Debt

County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe, left, handed a check to Charles F. Ackerman, president of the Mansfield Savings Trust national bank, yesterday, and thereby paid off the last of Richland county's bonded indebtedness. C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the board of county commissioners, center, looks on while the $9,000 check is being received by Ackerman. Today county government was debt-free for the first time in 30 years.

Detroit Takes Early Lead In Series Game

Derringer Driven From Mound In 2nd Inning as Tigers Tally Five Runs Newsom Starts for Bengals.

BULLETIN

CROSLEY FIELD — (AP) — Detroit's American league champions blasted Paul Derringer, Cincinnati's star hurler, off the mound with a five-hit, five-run barrage in the second inning today to take a long lead in the first game of the 1940 world series.

(By Associated Press)

CROSLEY FIELD, CINCINNATI — Two big righthanders, Buck Newsom and Paul Derringer, squared off on the pitching mound today as the Detroit Tigers and Cincinnati Reds opened the 1940 world series before a capacity crowd of 33,000 that included notable figures of sports, theatrical and political circles.

Newsom won 21 games and lost five in helping the Tigers to the American league championship while Derringer, the National league's finest curve baller, won 20 and lost 12 for the Reds.

Manager Del Baker of Detroit stuck to the batting order he announced yesterday, with Billy Sullivan catching and Bruce Campbell, both left-handed hitters, playing right field.

Bill McKechnie, his Cincinnati club crippled by recent injuries, waited until less than half an hour before game time to announce his batting order and finally disclosed that Coach Jimmy Wilson would catch Derringer and that lithe Eddie Joost would be at second base.

MEET TONIGHT

Representatives of Civic Clubs To Study Levy.

Organizing to support the proposed one-mill operating levy which will appear on the November ballot in Mansfield, representatives of 205 civic groups have been invited to meet tonight at 7:30 in the municipal court room.

Mayor William J. Locke who issued the invitations said today he hoped that representation would be general and that the meeting is open to any group interested in furthering the levy.

C. N. Shultz will act as temporary chairman of the meeting which, the mayor stressed, will be entirely non-political.

It was expected that a number of city officials and club representatives will speak in order to obtain a clear understanding of the levy proposal which would provide funds for police and fire departments, parks, airport, and public recreation.

BRICKER FAVORS LEGAL BARRIER

Would Pass Law Eliminating Communists From Ballot.

OTTAWA, O. — (AP) — Governor Bricker was on record today in favor of barring the Communist party candidates from the Ohio ballot by law.

He told the Northwestern Ohio Medical association yesterday that "there is not a foe in the world that can set foot on our shores if we don't want him to" and that "now more than ever there are people from within and without who are desirous of destroying our government."

MANSFIELD MAN KILLED BY TRAIN

Philip Leffler, 30, Falls Off Freight Car on Return From Indiana.

Returning to Mansfield from South Bend, Ind., where he had been looking for employment, Philip Leffler, 30, of Washington township, was killed yesterday in a fall from a freight train three miles west of Bryan, O.

Leffler, who had been unemployed for nearly a year, had been visiting his sister in South Bend, Mrs. Fred Flowers. He had been trying to obtain employment in South Bend.

Leffler is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Leffler, Washington township; two children, Jackie and Maxine, both of Mansfield; two brothers, Matthias and John, both of Mansfield; and Mrs. Flowers.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed at noon today. The body was brought to the Wappner funeral home from Bryan today.

Mansfield's In European Conflict But In Name Only

Mansfield is really in the European war today but you won't need to run for bomb shelters just yet. In fact, you won't even have to scan Touby creek or Ritter's run for sight of an enemy periscope.

It's only the city's name that's in the war. And it all came about this way:

When the United States recently transferred 50 over-age destroyers to Britain for the right to establish bases on British possessions in the western hemisphere the admiralty began looking around for new names to assign to the warcraft.

Today the admiralty announced that new names had been given to all of the destroyers and that 44 of them got names of towns common to both the United Kingdom and the United States.

"Mansfield" is one of those names. Others include Lancaster and Newark.

British Expect New Axis Drive On Suez Canal

Report Nazis Take Charge of Italian Troop Operations After Stalemate Of Duce's Forces; Aerial War Across Channel Continues.

(By United Press)

Great Britain prepared today against a possible new Axis offensive in the Mediterranean area, with Nazis taking charge of German and Italian military operations.

While aerial attack and counter-attack continued with terrible monotony in British and German territory, the Germans were reported by London military sources to have "taken de facto charge" of Italian operations and apparently to have moved troops into Italy.

The north African front—where Fascist forces have been stalled for more than two weeks after invading Egypt—was believed to be the most likely point for any new operations, with the Suez canal as the objective. British sources also have reported the Axis powers attempting to gain greater control of French Syria, presumably for a double attack on Suez, but the French government at Vichy denied these reports.

Developments in the Mediterranean area, however, did not appear likely to divert either British or German air forces from their main objectives in an aerial war that seemed more and more likely to drag on through a winter that threatens Europe with hunger and perhaps pestilence.

Dispatches from Vichy, the French capital, reported that British bombing raids on the French channel ports, especially Le Havre, had inflicted many casualties on French civilians as well as German military forces and had done great damage.

Le Havre harbor was reported clogged with sunken ships. Ninety-four civilians were reported killed and 200 wounded at that port alone.

British bombers roared over Germany again, giving Berlin another night of air raid alarm, bombing a munitions factory and racing over Duisberg, Cologne, Hamm, Rotterdam, and many continental ports to smash at German bases and supply centers.

British airplanes also raided Italian bases in Africa, causing fires and casualties at the Egyptian post of Bugbug, and at Libyan Tobruk. Similar attacks were made on Gherilli, in Italian Somaliland and the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad.

Italian planes again bombed Aden and British warships in the eastern Mediterranean.

On the diplomatic front, the Italian press continued to bombard United States efforts to support Great Britain and China, asserting that such aid was "absolutely inadmissible" and indicating that it eventually might be regarded by the Axis powers, including Japan, as an act of war.

RAF and British Navy Kept Busy

By J. C. OESTREICHER

Reports in London that Nazi Germany has taken "de facto" charge of Italy's military operations against the Suez canal gave a new twist today to repeated rumors that Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler was finally called off his projected invasion of England.

Seasoned observers have insisted from the beginning that successful military crossing of the channel would be impossible after the first of October because of weather conditions and the im-

ROCKED: Berlin Shaken By Terrific Bombing Explosions

(By United Press)

LONDON—Four "terrific explosions" rocked the northwest suburbs of Berlin during an attack by strong Royal Air Force squadrons on machinery and munitions factories, electric stations, oil plants and other objectives in Germany, the air ministry said today.

"A brilliant white flash," fires and explosions in the northwest suburbs of the German capital were described by the returning British pilots, who also said that after they bombed oil supplies at Sterkrade in the Ruhr area, a "vast pall of black smoke remained over the blazing target."

The R. A. F. attack extended from the French channel ports to Belgium and Holland and many points in Germany as a sweeping offensive was carried out against German war centers.

But the air ministry said that the bombers concentrated on northwest Berlin.

"That part of the city which is chiefly concerned with the manufacture of heavy machinery" was described as blasted by four big explosions when one pilot dropped his explosives on the B. I. T. electrical equipment plant.

"The pilot's plane was lit up by a brilliant white flash," the communique continued, "and other bombers over the target reported further fires and explosions within the area."

The communique said that at Sterkrade "a large fuel tank was hit and great fires broke out. . . .

ALARM: Jap Papers Worried Over U. S.-British Reaction

(By United Press)

TOKYO—Newspapers, reflecting increasing government alarm over the possibility of British and American pressure, indicated today that Japan would regard the reopening of the Burma road of supply to China by Britain as an open challenge and would act accordingly.

Yomiuri said that if Great Britain decided to reopen the Burma road Japan would not ask it not to, but would resort to its "own measures" to "remove all obstacles to the Japanese mission of constructing a greater east Asia."

It was commented that British refusal to keep the road closed, and thus close to China one of its two remaining sources of foreign supply, was indicated by recent British-American activites especially United States reaction to the new Japanese-German-Italian alliance.

Asahi said that "world" concern was now focused on the counter measures Britain and the United States might take to meet the situation arising from the pact.

Britain, it said, had started negotiations with the dominions to prohibit export of munitions materials to Japan. However, it added, only tin, rubber and iron ores from

Detroit Judge 'Goes Haywire' With Gun, Shoots Three

KILLS PARTNER IN DISPUTE AT COUNTY OFFICE

Michigan Police Start Search For Fugitive Jurist and Former Prizefighter.

(By Associated Press)

DETROIT—A statewide police search for Common Pleas Judge Robert E. Sage was under way today as a result of a shooting which left one man dead and two others wounded in the judge's office in the county building.

Inspector Paul O. Whitman of the homicide squad quoted the wounded men as saying the 41-year-old judge "seemed to go suddenly haywire" during an argument last night with three partners in a business enterprise, drew a pistol from his desk, and began firing.

Shot In Head.

Ralph Nadell, 48, of suburban Birmingham, fell with a bullet through his head. Al Nadell, 39, his brother, and Maurice D. Smilay, 56-year-old Detroit attorney, suffered shoulder wounds.

By the time police arrived Judge Sage, a veteran politician and a one-time lumberjack and professional prizefighter, had fled, hatless and coatless, from the building.

Smilay said the four men had gathered in the judge's office to discuss a court decision which threatened operation of Sports Park here. All were directors of the park, he said, and Judge Sage had invested heavily in it.

Pacifier.

During the argument which developed, Whitman quoted Smilay as saying, the judge suddenly produced the pistol, cried "This will pacify everybody," and opened fire.

Formal charges against Sage were delayed pending developments of the search.

He came to Detroit 21 years ago from his home in Wallace, Ida., and literally fought his way through the University of Detroit law school. As a professional fighter he earned a considerable reputation, and was dubbed "The Battling Barrister" by sports writers.

Marriage Permits During September Establish Record

Could Dan Cupid have had "outside" aid during the month of September? Probate court clerks were asking this question today as they compiled figures on the number of marriage licenses issued during the month and found that they set an all-time record for the month of September.

There were 69 licenses issued during the month, 17 more than the number issued last September, and only six under the number issued in August, always a peak month for mid-summer brides.

The increase in the number of licenses issued has been steady since the draft bill appeared on the horizon to perplex men of draft ages, according to court clerks.

Every month since the draft bill became a national issue has seen an increase in marriage licenses over the same month a year ago, clerks said today.

COURT JUDGES SCANTY PANTY

Chorines to Parade in Test of Undraperies.

CHICAGO—(AP)—The line forms at the right, boys, for the Oct. 18 session of Judge Francis Borelli's court.

The bare facts are these: A detective, testifying at a hearing for six night club chorines charged with indecent exposure, claimed the girls were dancing a la September morn.

Defense counsel maintained they were wearing panties and brassieres. But, the state countered, how long were the panties? The court ordered counsel to produce a pair of the panties for judicial determination.

Congress Has Difficulty Raising Quorum

The spire of the First Congregational church, tallest in Mansfield, is getting a new coat of silver paint, and the three painters who are up on the 200-foot tower are trusting their lives to a small steel cable that wraps around the spire. A circular scaffold around the spire enables the painters to reach all parts of it with little difficulty. The scaffold anchors to the steel cable which can be moved up and down the spire with ease.

But his displeasure changed to surprise when he walked into the living room and found an unknown man sleeping calmly on the davenport. Anderson went to call police. When he returned the visitor was gone. By that time he was through being displeased, chagrined or anything else. "He must just have got in the wrong house," Anderson shrugged.

In the November issue of "Startling Detective Adventures," Mansfield veteran detective, Lee Remy, co-authors a true detective story entitled "Trapping Ohio's Murderous Sex Fiends." Remy was instrumental in trapping the three killers of young Ralph Wilcox, Galion filling station owner, back in 1930. The trio had committed a sex crime in Richland county shortly before the Wilcox murder. All of them paid for their crimes in the electric chair. Pictures of Wilcox, his wife, the three killers and Remy appear with the story.

HIT NEW LOW

Water, Sewer Delinquencies Lowest In Years.

A new low in delinquencies on water and sewer bills was reported today by Fred E. Lingafelter, secretary of the city water department.

"Unpaid bills are the lowest in many years," Lingafelter asserted pointing to total delinquency at the opening of the present collection period, Oct. 1, of $530.36 for sewer rental and $4,640 for water.

He contrasted these figures with the same period a year ago when water delinquencies were $10,301 and sewers $765. Delinquencies in the water department were at their peak in 1936 when the total was $36,000, Lingafelter said.

OPEN QUOTA FOR CCC ALTERNATES

Applications are now being received at the relief office for alternates in Richland county's next quota of 19 youths for Civilian Conservation Corps service.

It was announced today that the quota of 19 has been filled but that alternates are needed to take the place of any of the original 19 who might be turned down for physical or other reasons.

Applications may be made any morning except Saturday until the group leaves for camp Oct. 14. Young men between the ages of 17 and 23 may apply, bringing birth certificates, social security numbers and cards from the employment office.

AUTO CLUB HAS RECORD DAY

Officials Report Greatest Day After Deadline Sale In 5 Year History.

With the number of motorists applying for driver's licenses greatly reduced today Auto club officials reported that they had had the greatest day after deadline license sale in their five-year history yesterday.

Altogether 1,389 licenses were issued at the club yesterday against 810 written last year, showing an increase of 579.

With the additional 1,389 licenses written yesterday, the number reached a 15,652 total, exceeding last year's total for a like period by 385. Last year's total was 15,267.

A decline in the number of chauffeur's licenses sold this year as against that of last year was shown by today's report. Last year 1,393 chauffeur's permits had been issued during the month, while only 1,323 had been written this year over a like period.

WAR DEPARTMENT OPPOSED TO CENSORSHIP FOR U. S. PAPERS

NEW YORK—(AP)—The war department's opposition to censorship was voiced today by Lieut. Col. Stanley J. Grogan of the general staff press section.

The army, Colonel Grogan declared, thinks that censorship "is very often worse than that which it attempts to prevent."

He praised American newspapers for "a magnificent service in the national defense effort," and said that military officials believed th press would co-operate voluntarily with authorities in such a way "as to make censorship unnecessary."

In a speech prepared for the Overseas Press club at the World's fair, Colonel Grogan explained the army's press relations policy and mentioned two topics which, he emphasized, were still in the realm of "conjecture."

One was whether the war department might use some opinion polling service to measure public reaction to its operations.

The other was whether the present army press organization "in a time of greater peril" might become part of a large governmental public relations agency like the Creel committee on public information in the World war."

PASTOR DIES

Dr. S. L. Stewart Was Minister In Mansfield For 6 Years.

Word has been received of the death of Dr. Samuel L. Stewart, 69, of Youngstown, former Mansfield pastor, who died Tuesday night of a heart attack.

More than 25 years ago, Dr. Stewart was pastor of the First Methodist church here and was prominent in the remodeling program of the present building. He served the local church for six years, from there going into a district superintendency.

He was a native of Guernsey county. At the time of his death he was pastor of the Belmont Methodist church in Youngstown. Three years ago he left the Cuyahoga Falls Methodist church where he served for eight years. Other pastorates included Wooster, Massillon and Elyria.

DIES AT HOME AT AGE OF 76

Jacob F. Mader Succumbs at Home In Bucyrus.

BUCYRUS — Following a six months illness, Jacob F. Mader, 76, died last night at his home, 503 South Poplar street. Born in Chillicothe, he came to Bucyrus in 1887 and operated a cafe here until his retirement six years ago. He was a member of Good Hope Lutheran church.

His wife, Ella, survives.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. in the Wise funeral home, Rev. H. H. Glick officiating. Burial will be in Oakwood cemetery.

Laff-a-Day

"Hello, Gracie, would you like to be my bridesmaid again? Same place, same time."

RECESS UNTIL MID-NOVEMBER BEING STUDIED

Leaders Abandon Adjournment Hope; Excess Profits Tax Measure Approved.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Administration leaders hope to determine today whether congress can recess until mid-November or will be forced to remain in almost continuous session for the rest of the year.

All hopes of an adjournment until Jan. 3, 1941, when the new congress convenes, has been abandoned. Senate leaders are trying to get a recess until Nov. 11, or Nov. 18—after the election—but house leaders are not sure that they can get agreement to it on their side. Senate Leader Alben W. Barkley said he may know the answer today.

Congress is expected to clean up its pending calendar by Saturday night or at least by a week from today. If a recess to a definite date is not agreed upon, a series of three-day recesses will be ordered with a gentlemen's agreement that no lgislation will be acted upon.

Senate and house leaders said that if congress doesn't recess soon, it may be difficult to find a quorum for daily sessions. Only 22 of the 435 members of the house answered a quorum call yesterday. Daily senate attendance has been around 60.

A major barrier to a recess was cleared yesterday when both the house and senate approved the conference report on the excess profits tax bill and sent it to the White House. There was no record vote in either chamber.

The senate appropriations committee may finish work today on the house approved $1,500,000,000 national defense bill, containing funds to defray conscription costs, and on the final deficiency bill to finance departments which underestimated their needs. Barkley said that both bills would be ready for the president's signature by Saturday.

Senate and house conferees expect to complete action today on the Ramspeck civil service bill permitting the president to blanket approximately 150,000 workers under the civil service system.

The house debates minor bills which have been amended by the senate, while the senate resumes consideration of a controversial conference report on a bill to fix labeling standards for wool products.

ILL ONE YEAR

Mrs. Caroline Badgley, 81, Was Native of Galion.

GALION—Mrs. Caroline Badgley, 81, life-long resident of Galion, died early today at her home, 221 East Parson street, following an illness of a year.

She was born in Galion June 12, 1859. In 1882 she married Henry Badgley, who preceded her in death 11 years ago.

Surviving are three sons, G. M. Badgley, Harry and Arthur, all of Galion; six grandchildren; two brothers, John and Henry Heiser; two sisters, Mrs. Louise Decker and Mrs. Rose Trautman, all of this place.

Friends may call at the Snyder funeral home Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. at the funeral home in charge of Rev. R. R. Elliker, pastor of First Reformed church. Burial will be in Fairview cemetery.

DECLARES NAZIS DELAY COURIERS

Pan American Airways Official Reports 'Retaliation.'

NEW YORK — (AP) — A Pan American airways official says U. S. state department couriers to Germany are being detained "deliberately" by German consular officers in crossing occupied France as a German "retaliatory measure" for the sale of destroyers to Britain.

Paul Miscione, traffic manager for Pan American at Lisbon, Portugal, told reporters yesterday on his arrival by clipper that some couriers, carrying confidential diplomatic messages, had been delayed as much as three weeks.

SAILORS SAVED

28 Members of Sunken Ship Crew Arrive In Ireland.

LONDON — (AP) — Twenty-eight crewmen of the 4,219-ton Norwegian vessel Vedvind, which was torpedoed Friday off the Hebrides, were safe in Ireland after four days and nights in an open lifeboat. They reported one seaman was drowned.

It's Power vs. Pitching as Tigers, Reds Open Series

Juniors Start Friday

Snyder Shakes Up Tygers For New Philly Game, Stresses Passes.

Juniors on Mansfield High's football squad are going to get their chance to rise to the heights Friday night against New Philadelphia at Stadium field.

That was today's thought from Coach Paul Snyder, at any rate, who hasn't been very well pleased with the way the seniors on the team have been going lately.

As a result, he's going to start a team made up almost entirely of juniors, and give them their chance at glory.

The invading New Philly team hasn't been tough this season—not as tough as last season, at any rate—but that doesn't mean that Snyder is starting juniors because he expects an easy game. He's starting them because they've looked better than the seniors.

Two items of business are on the agenda for the two remaining drill sessions for the Tygers tonight and tomorrow. One is smoothing out of the passing attack, which has been ineffective thus far this season. The other is the time-honored task of stopping the invader's defense.

In three games to date, the Tygers have thrown a fair quota of passes, but they haven't had signal success in the matter of completions. Either the passer has hurried or been hurried, or he has led his receivers too far. —That's what Snyder will try to remedy.

Scouts' reports on New Philly warn of the ability of Holyoak, a stellar end who is as good on offense as defense, Russell, a good passing half back, and Fabiano, a hard-charging fullback. The latter is a veteran from last year's team. Fans who saw New Philly in action last year probably remember him well. The 1939 New Philly club trimmed Mansfield 20-0.

The fact that New Philly hasn't won a game this year doesn't give the Tygers the right to take them easy, Snyder insists.

The invading club lost most of its regulars by graduation but ought to be rounding into shape by now. Even Lorain's one-sided victory last week over New Philly doesn't impress the Tyger mentor with New Philly's weakness. All reports from the lake shore indicate that Lorain has come up with one of its powerhouse teams again.

PARKING SPACE AVAILABLE

Mansfield football fans were advised today by Senior high school officials that there will be plenty of parking space at Stadium Field for those planning to attend the Mansfield-New Philadelphia game Friday night. Fans will be able to park their automobiles on the practice field west of Stadium Field, officials said.

Shelby Seeks 4th Triumph

Whippets Out to Topple Bucyrus Combine.

SHELBY—Undefeated in three games, the Shelby high Whippets will be out for their fourth win of the season when they meet the Bucyrus Redmen under the floodlights at W. W. Skiles athletic field here at 8 p. m. Friday.

Shelby leads the North Central league football race with its 7 to 6 win over Ashland high last week.

No other league contests have been played. Only one other league game is scheduled Friday, Ashland high school goes to Marion to meet the Harding Presidents in a night game.

Shelby's second league test will come in the Bucyrus game when the team meets a strong defensive club. Bucyrus defeated Upper Sandusky, 20 to 0, last week.

Coach William Query is stressing blocking this week in the Shelby squad drills. Several new "surprise" plays have been given to the Shelby squad in preparation for the Bucyrus grid contest.

One Shelby player may be again absent from the starting line up. He is Bob Ernsberger, veteran halfback, who has been unable to attend classes this week because of illness. Ernsberger was out of the Ashland contest.

WEDDING BELLS SOON FOR JOHNNY VANDER MEER

CINCINNATI —(U.P.)— Wedding bells will ring soon for Johnny Vander Meer of the Cincinnati Reds. He announced through Bob Stiger, his business agent, today that he would marry Lois Stewart, of Scranton, Pa., his childhood sweetheart, within three weeks after the end of the world series.

Six Bowlers Top 200 In League Tilts

Although a variety of league teams bowled at the Meder alleys last night, there wasn't much thunder in the way of falling pins.

Only six 200-game scores were recorded, with Shiveley of the Mill Room team in the Mansfield Tire league getting two of them, Cousins of the Globe Steels in the Transportation league got one. So did Wintersteen of the Kraft Cheese team—he hit 200 right on the nose—and Applan of the Mansfield Tire Foremen, and Huck of the Jake Miller team in the Transportation loop.

Shiveley put together a 202, 203 and a 154 for the total of 559, but Huck's 210 in the second game, together with a 198 and 161 gave him a 569 for the night's high total.

The scores:

Date Set For Smallwood, Carbetta Fight In Akron.

Paul Carbetta, Mansfield flyweight, will have a chance to square accounts with Buddy Smallwood of Akron in an amateur boxing match Oct. 29 at Akron. Carbetta, a promising youngster, lost to Smallwood in the semi-finals of the Cleveland Golden Gloves tournament this spring. Smallwood went on to win the open championship. The two youths will tangle in a third fight in Mansfield in November.

Supplies to Invade Canton

Mansfield Semi-Pros Meet Bulldogs Sunday.

Coach Earl McMullen had his Automotive Supply semi-pro football machine going through its paces today in preparation for the invasion of Canton Sunday to meet the Canton Bulldogs.

McMullen is concentrating this week on his offense which bogged down against the Akron Awnings last Sunday. He indicated today that there may be a shakeup in the Supplies' backfield for Sunday's contest.

The Supply mentor had several new candidates working out with the squad at Tappan field, but isn't sure whether any one of them will see action against Canton.

Manley Stars As Newman Wins 19-0

Bowman, Carpenter Also Win in Other School Tilts.

Paced by Manley, the Newman elementary school touch-football team routed Prospect 19 to 0 yesterday afternoon in one of three grid games played in the grade school loop.

Manly scored in each of the first three quarters for Newman with Baker kicking the extra point in the first period.

Bowman school took advantage of a scoring opportunity in the first quarter of its game with Brinkerhoff to score its only touchdown and nose out Brinkerhoff 7 to 0. Majors carried the ball over with Angle booting the extra point.

A pass caught by D. Richards and good for a touchdown, gave Carpenter school its only score as Carpenter edged West Fifth school 6 to 0 in the other game played.

Shouting's Over But Old Hank Greenberg Labors on

By HENRY McLEMORE.

CINCINNATI —(U.P.)— The tumult and shouting of the Tigers' final World series workout has ended, but the captain and the king didn't depart. Long after the other players were in the locker room, and the groundskeepers had taken over the field, Hank Greenberg labored on.

Deep in left field, and with only the youngster who was hitting fly balls to him for company, Greenberg practiced the business of going to his left, galloping to his right, turning back to the wall, and leaping in for short flies. He threw to all the bases, handled ground balls, and studied the drift of balls in the wind.

Hank's willingness to do a little more work, try a little harder, was reminiful of Joe DiMaggio's determination to get his batting eye in this same park a year ago. Joe worked a full hour after his teammates had called it quits, swinging at pitches. He took his cut until he began to find the range of the walls, and you'll remember that it paid off in the series.

Greenberg didn't have to work yesterday, for all the men who started the series today he is the biggest star. His salary is tops in either league. He is the American League home run king with 41, the leader in doubles with 50, top man in batting at one time with .370, batted across the plate a 330 times, and far from being the worst left fielder in the business.

But Greenberg is a perfectionist. No one will ever know how many hours he practiced when he first went to Detroit as a first baseman. Not a natural player, he had to get his skill the hard way. He was in the park every morning, practicing the fielding of balls to his right then, because Charley Gehringer was in his prime as a second baseman and could get anything on that side of Hank. He worked himself into one of the best first basemen in the business.

When they moved him to left field last spring, and gave first base to Rudy York, Greenberg started toiling all over again. He was the first man in the park and the last one to leave.

"I'm going to learn to play the outfield if it kills me," he said. "I just don't want to be known as a big guy with a big stick in my hand."

He was awkward as two left shoes when the season opened, but the finish of it found him a better than average outfielder, and the most valuable man in the league. He not only did a good job of left fielding but he had the best year of his career at bat. Never before had he hit as high as .340.

Big Hank is the fellow the Reds' pitchers must stop if the National League is at last to win a World series from the American. He was bouncing balls off the fence and in the bleachers in batting practice. I picked the Reds in six games but I'm not so sure after seeing Greenberg in that extra practice session. If he isn't satisfied with himself, and intends to increase the tempo of his havoc, then he can join the Derringers, Walters, and the rest.

Jimmy Set--If Needed

Buck Backfield Ace To Be In Uniform If Purdue Gets Too Tough.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Should the pressure on Ohio State's Big Ten conference champs become too great next Saturday in the first defense of their crown against Purdue, a 187-pound piece of backfield dynamite with a tender ankle will be ready for action.

Jim Strausbaugh, the mercurial veteran left halfback from Chillicothe, has nursed his sprained right ankle back to good condition in an amazingly short time.

Although Coach Francis Schmidt and Trainer Tucker Smith prefer to let him rest another week, he'll be in uniform for the opening conference game. Dick Fisher, the Columbiana Clipper, adequately filled Strausbaugh's post against Pitt and Schmidt said he is willing to allow Fisher to start next Saturday again.

For the first time yesterday Jim appeared for practice. His recovery speeded by a new type therapeutic machine. Jim tested out his ankle, passed and punted with his left foot. (He ordinarily punts right footed.)

In the passing division of the Buckeye machine the Pitt game uncovered the fact that Schmidt has more ball tossers than he had thought previously. The name of Jim Sexton, substitute quarterback from Middletown who bulleted two passes in the fourth quarter for a touchdown, may be added to those other sterling hurlers lauded by Assistant Coach Eddie Blickle.

"When you talk about passers," Blickle, who concentrates on the backs, said, "Give me Don Scott, Jack Graf and Harold (Cookie) Nichols in that order.

* * *

"That boy Graf is one of the most beautiful passers I've ever seen and Nichols is going to really be something in his junior and senior years."

Brietz Picks Reds to Win In Six or Seven Games

By EDDIE BRIETZ

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Bulletin —It looks like a long, hard series, ladies and gentlemen, with the Reds winning in six or seven games.

Those who pick the Tigers do so because of their power and the long Cincinnati casualty list . . . The Tigers have the power, all right, but we have an idea those injuries are of the "football injury" variety . . . You know, a star halfback runs a fever Friday night, then goes out there Saturday and runs his head off.

RUMOR FOUNDRY

This one is only guaranteed for 30 minutes, but it's red hot here . . . That Phil Wrigley wants Larry MacPhail to become generalissimo of the club next season . . . (Just listen to that Flatbush roar!) . . . Another says Billy Evans, boss of the Red Sox farm system, is shopping for a minor league club of his own, preferably Toledo or Milwaukee.

LOBBY GOINGS ON

Corn belt writers forgetting the series and such a rave about Maj. Biff Jones' Nebraska football team . . . Heinie Martin of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald taking a few bows for himself for predicting three weeks ago that the Tigers would cinch the flat the day they won their 90th game . . . That's just what they did and Mr. Martin can move over on the bench reserved for those who call their shots . . . Another rumor: Kirby Higbe of the Phils has been sold to the Cubs and Hugh Mulcahy will be the next to go.

VOTE FOR BRIGGS

Somebody has suggested Walter O. Briggs of Detroit should be designated as the "owner of the year." . . . and why not, for crying out loud? . . . he lost 90 ball players and still won the pennant . . . Here's another vote for Mr. Briggs.

Sox to Get Look At Rookie Olsen

CHICAGO—(AP)—The Chicago White Sox returned to Wrigley field today for a look at the southpaw slant of Rookie Vern Olsen, whose puzzling delivery earned 13 victories for the Cubs in the national league campaign.

Manager Gabby Hartnett looked to Olsen to even the city American leaguers who took the opener yesterday, 5 to 3, behind Ted Lyons' pitching and hitting.

Tigers Boast Batting Attack Including Four .300 Hitters.

By HARRY FERGUSON.

CINCINNATI — (UP) —It's power against pitching, brawn against brains as the Detroit Tigers and Cincinnati Reds open the world series today.

Favorites in the betting at 3 to 2 boasting four .300 hitters and a line-up loaded with enough power to break down the walls at Crosly field, the Tigers are the Goliaths of this struggle that starts at 1:30 p. m. (EST) on the banks of the Ohio.

Against that awesome array the Reds will send a cunning, fast-thinking ball club that is weak on hitting but has more good pitchers than a crockery merchant.

Cincinnati's half million residents made every hour a carnival time as the opening of the series approached. All of the 33,000 seats in Crosley field are sold, grandstands have been built on roofs, window space in apartments overlooking the park sells for a $1 a square yard and flags brighten the streets. Business will stop for two hours this afternoon when old Bill Klem dusts off the plate and tells the boys to go to it.

For Detroit it will be Bobo Newsom, the fireball right hander, on the mound. Boasting a record of 21 games won and only five lost during the regular season, Bobo delivered himself an oration last evening, the gist of which was that he would blow the Reds down with his fast one.

Deep, mysterious silence came from the Cincinnati board of strategy, and there is a fair chance that Deacon Bill McKechnie, the wily manager of the Reds, is cooking up a plot. He refused to name his starting pitcher, but hinted that it would be one of his ace right handers—Paul Derringer or Bucky Walters. The best guess is that it will be Derringer, a cool, nervy citizen who is just about the best control pitcher in baseball.

Despite the fact that their lineup is loaded with aged ball players, the Tigers are in good physical condition. Manager Del Baker will be able to field his strongest team and shoot in capable, able-bodied reserves in emergencies.

The Reds' dressing room, on the other hand, looks like the receiving ward of an emergency hospital. Little Lonnie Frey, one of the best second basemen in the National league, apparently is out out of the series with a fractured toe. Unless Frey has a miraculous recovery his place will be taken by Eddie Joost, a light hitter.

Ernie Lombardi, the big catcher and one of the few Cincinnati men who can match his hitting power with Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, Detroit's big guns, has a fractured ankle. He, too, tried to work out yesterday but it was obvious that he was in pain. Jimmy Wilson, 40 years old, will catch if Lombardi is unable to work. The absence of Lom's big bat will be a sore blow to the Reds.

Jimmy Ripple, nursing a sore wrist, is ready to start in left field for the Reds, but there is no telling when the injury will force him out of the game.

* * *

Despite the casualty list, confidence runs through this city and McKechnie predicts victory no matter how much he has to patch his line-up. He thinks he has a better ball club than the outfit that went up against the New York Yankees last year and lost four straight games through jittery, uncertain fielding.

Eagle Bantams Home Sunday

Meet Strong Akron Eleven In Game at Fairground.

Sporting one victory so far this season, the Eagles Lodge bantamweight football team will play its first home game at the Fairground Sunday afternoon engaging the strong Akron Leightweight squad.

The game is scheduled for 2:30 p. m. and is the second contest for the Eagles team this year. In their first tilt the Eagles edged a Canton bantamweight eleven, 6 to 0.

* * *

Akron brings a powerful team here for the tilt, with two outstanding players, "Red" Manning, a kicker, and Fenrick, a halfback. Outstanding in the Mansfield backfield are Krupp, Miles and Fred Hallabrin.

In two games this season, Akron has won one and held the Cleveland Skippies to a 0-0 tie.

CHAPTER I

JOCELYN BRITTON was always the last to leave the office. She explained now and then to the other stenographers of Fordyce, Sawyer & Fordyce, a law firm in San Francisco, that she did a little work on the side for a social bureau in New York, kept them in touch with the new names in society, watched the obituary columns to inform them when names dropped out.

"It takes real secretarial work, and it only pays me a hundred a year!" Jocelyn might complain philosophically to anyone who was interested or seemed interested. But everyone knew that the real reason she remained late was the hope that Kent Dunham would come down from his studio on the top floor and have a few minutes with her. They would leave the office together and cross to the parking station half a block up Sutter street to the garage where Kent kept his motorcar. Sometimes he took Jocelyn home, but more often she walked. She boarded in a place called the Cresenta Loma, in Bush street, not far away. She did not often ride home with Kent.

All the girls knew this. They knew of the existence of Kent Dunham's wife—a pretty, plump, well-curled little woman who thought a great deal about clothes and furniture. Sometimes Lilian Dunham came to the garage after an afternoon in the shops or beauty parlor and waited for him in the car. She knew Jocelyn, of course, and they acted toward each other like friends. And yet Jocelyn never ran the risk of meeting Lilian if she could help it.

She and Kent usually parted at the corner; two years ago they had often lingered at this corner, and then Kent had walked up Bush street with her to the Cresenta Loma, and she had walked back with him. But for the last few months they had been parting, the office girls noted, at the corner. Perhaps Mrs. Dunham was getting tired of tolerating this affair between her husband and the stenographer downstairs. Or perhaps Kent Dunham was getting tired. Certainly it was not Miss Britton who was tired, and her moods fluctuated between happiness and depression exactly as Kent Dunham was being attentive or being neglectful. Any child could see that!

Just how far this affair had been carried by the principals, no girl in the office quite dared say. Some thought one thing, some another. The defenders of Jocelyn Britton's integrity were apt to weaken a little when some voice said impatiently, "Oh, stop talking nonsense! Of course they're lovers!" And on the other hand there was always someone to protect Jocelyn's name if the consensus of opinion went against her, and to say with equal asperity, "Now, listen. I've known her for five years, right here in this office. Her aunt is Mrs. Bartley Partridge of Sausalito; they're perfectly lovely people; she's way above most of us in the way she was educated and the way she thinks, and it's nonsense to say that she and Kent Dunham . . . it's just nonsense! They like each other a lot, and that's as far as it goes!"

However far it had gone, it had gone too far for Jocelyn's happiness and peace of mind as she sat waiting for Kent on a certain dark grimy November afternoon some two weeks before Thanksgiving. It was five o'clock, and everyone else had gone home. Old Mr. Fordyce had not come into town at all; Mr. Phil had merely walked into his office, with his cap under his arm and his big loose brown coat hanging open, and had glanced at his mail and gone away again. Jocelyn worked on, and she said in her heart that he was not coming.

Her heart knew exactly how often he had come in during the last twenty-four nights. Eight times. He had had to go to Portland, of course, that accounted for four nights — accounted for five really, for Lillian would have met him at the flying field to drive him home upon his return; he couldn't have left her that night. That left eleven nights' absence unexplained; not that any explanation would mean anything. He simply — hadn't come. She had sat here in this office, whose every desk and chair, contour of wall and fold of rich long curtain she so hated, so despised, and she had waited for him, as he had known she would, and he hadn't come.

He had known that she would watch the little detestable clock that ticked away so smugly on her desk; he had known that she would seize the telephone with a wild rising beat of her heart, only to lay it down again in cold sickness of spirit; he had known that at quarter to six—at ten minutes of six, she would give him up, start for home, walk the darkening blocks of Bush street slowly, let herself in with a latch key to the smells of loneliness of an evening at the Cresenta Loma.

Why? Why? Why should he deliberately hurt her so much, when he had so many times said he loved her more than anything in the world, more than his job, his position, his wife, his honor? But of course he wasn't deliberately hurting her. Not Kent, who had scribbled her those notes two years ago, had treasured every moment he could have with her, had all but fainted with sheer emotion one day when unexpectedly she had telephoned him!

Things had changed. An affair, even of so unsatisfying, so ephemeral a nature, naturally knew its ups and downs. It could not stay at the trembling peaks it had reached when first they had known that they loved each other. Jocelyn had admitted that to her unwilling heart many weeks ago. But for Kent to avoid her, not to see her sometimes for days together—when she was so accessible, when seeing her was so easy!—no, she could not understand that. She could not fit that into her philosophy at all.

But this afternoon, suddenly, like water breaking through into the parched cup of a sun-baked spring, the sound of his foot came along the hallway from the elevator, and his hand touched the doorknob, and everything was right again. A wintry afternoon, in the president's luxurious office, became the time and place for all the beauty and joy of the world to meet. Jocelyn pushed a last paper into a drawer; the smooth top of her desk was broken only by the telephone and the handsome heavy crystal inkwell now; she looked up, the only lighted thing in the dark place herself; her lambent eyes, her squared fine shoulders, the glory of her hair.

The man who came in had seen all, this too often to see it now at all. But no man ever saw Jocelyn's face for the first time without a responsive thrill. It was still a girl's face, despite her more than twenty-seven years; there was in it, and in her whole person, something lean, eager, questing, young.

Her eyes were of so dark a blue, so widely spaced and deep-set that they seemed to shadow the delicate flesh of her temples and her high cheekbones. Her mouth was wide and fine; her brows like soft dark brushes; her skin had a fine clear pallor that was rarely warmed by a flush. But the amazing thing was her hair; hair of pure baby gold, flying away as thistledown, shining in striking contrast to the soft paleness of her face and the shadowed eyes. In any group, in any office, anywhere, everywhere, men looked first at Jocelyn Britton and then at any other girl who happened to be around. She looked mysterious, aloof, foreign, although she was none of these things. She looked as if she might be occupied principally with her own strange beauty; as a matter of fact it gave her little pleasure.

Beauty was made for dancing, for popularity and excitement, for the lure of wonderful new hats and frocks, for moonlight nights on tropical beaches and noonday lunches in great hotel dining rooms. Jocelyn had never known any of these things. If beauty bought them for other women, it had never seemed to bring her any nearer them. She lived in a boardinghouse, where elderly folk were kind to her, and where she had a nice room with a row of good books to keep her company in it. Men had admired her often, and had sometimes asked her to go to movies, or off for Sunday trips, but she had not been free until two years ago to leave an invalided and adoring mother, and for more than the past two years Kent had been all her world.

He came into the office smiling, and sat down opposite her just as he always did, and their four hands met across the flat top of the desk. So far everything was as usual, and yet nothing was. Jocelyn, when she spoke, tried to make her voice sound cheerful and loving and confident, and knew that she failed.

"Well, I was afraid I was never going to see you again! What have you been doing and where have you been?" she began.

"I was in Portland, you know. Had to go up."

"I've seen you twice since you got back, Kent." It was a gentle reminder, delivered with a smile that was understanding. But she hated herself for it. It sounded patient, longsuffering, wifely. Everything that would help a man remember that the speaker had feelings, rights, sensitivities. Just the attitude she didn't want to take, ever, with Kent! Lilian's hurt, virtuous, kind tone.

"Of course you have. But I get mixed up, living in such a whirl. Sure, I was in here last week."

"Thursday. And this is more than a week later," her thoughts said. Aloud she added: "It's all right, as long as things are going well with you."

"They're going a little too well," he confessed ruefully, rushing into the opening. "They're sending me to Portland—Judson talked to me about it yesterday. Well, he really talked to me about it on Saturday night. He and Ruth—that's the wife, and a sweet girl, too—twenty-three, and first baby, all that! They came up and had dinner with us on Saturday, and afterward we talked it over. They want me to go to the Portland office at seventy a week. Substantial raise right there."

This was a blow straight at Jocelyn's heart; she could not rally from it immediately. No muscle of her face changed, but the light that had flooded it faded with the effect of a candle being removed from behind the translucence of a shell. She sat immovable, staring at him, her breath coming from slightly parted lips.

"What — what does Lilian think?" she presently said, vaguely aware that he had been talking on, irrelevantly and uneasily; he had said things about rents in Portland and Lilian's dislike for the fogs of San Francisco.

"Oh, she's delighted to move! Her brother lives there," Lilian had a dull, prosperous brother. Jocelyn reflected; he and his wife and their children would all help in the good work of bringing Lilian's artistic and temperamental husband back into the fold. "But there's more to it than that, Joy," Kent said, suddenly courageous and honest. "Even if we weren't going—even if things were going along here as they always have, I'd made up my mind to—to stop it. That it had to end."

Jocelyn looked steadily at him; she did not speak.

"For your sake, and my sake, and hers," Kent said.

"Hers?"

"Lilian's. She's always been square with me, and I have to be square with her."

"I wonder why, so suddenly, after eleven completely eventless years of marriage?" Some remote part of Jocelyn's brain questioned dispassionately. "Lilian has been square." Another detached bit of thinking formulated coldly: "Because no human being has ever tempted her to be anything else." She said nothing aloud.

"I happen to be a horribly honest person," Kent was saying. "I've not been happy about all this. Not a bit! But our friendship was so sacred to me, Joy, I was proud of it, that I think I lost my bearings for a little while. And now—that's that!" Kent went on, in a lighter tone, "and — you're walking home? Here's your coat: I'm walking, too. I'll go as far as Powell anyway with you. And I was going to say," he resumed—and Jocelyn could tell from his tone that he had thought out all these phrases in advance—"we're always to be the best of friends. Here's the elevator. Good evening, Lenny. My dear," Kent said, steering her along the dusky street past the lighted restaurants and corner cigar stands, "I'll never have another friend like you—I know that. Nothing can take away from us the beauty of this friendship of ours. You're always going to have a place of your own in my heart."

Emptiness: ashes; shadows. Whips falling on her bare flesh, and all the time the dear big hand firm under her elbow in the remembered way, and the marvelous voice close at her ear. The voice that always had a little laughter in it, and a little hoarseness, and an undertone of eagerness and decision.

"Joy," he said, "there've been times when I resented your straight—your strength, darling. You know I've been terribly rebellious sometimes—terribly angry at you and your eternal 'We've got to be fair to Lilian!' When I kissed you, when I held you in my arms, and when I knew that I never could take ultimate possession, that the Puritan in you would always win, it used to almost kill me, dear! I've walked up and down opposite the Cresenta Loma on hundred nights, watching for the lights to go out in your window, knowing that you were lying there, like a clean sweet fragrant lily, in the dark . . ."

He had always had phrases. It was part of his charm that he knew poets and loved beautiful words. He was full of charm. For Jocelyn there was nothing about him that did not charm, did not turn her heart to water. If it had been only the physical thing, the hunger of youth for youth, it could not have lasted, in her case at least, for these two years. She did love him that way, too. But it was companionship that was so wonderful in her lonely life; companionship, and the good talk of books, and the laughter over little things, and the sense that he liked as well as loved her; all this had irradiated the world for her for breathless months. And now it was over. Now in utter chill and sickness of spirit she had to tell herself that it was over.

The drab streets slipped by them; the city was ugly and dull and cold tonight. Jocelyn's chief consciousness was of a hatred of herself so violent that it eclipsed all feeling for him. Fool to play along with a man whose wife could whistle him back so easily, who could take this position of understanding and pity and kindness, and go free, as she could never be free, she told herself bitterly, of his words and kisses again! Oh, if she could have been talking this way to him, rather than he to her!

"Lilian's packing now; we'll be out by the twenty-first. That's Monday. But she wants to get out the Saturday before and have a day or two with her mother. I'm going up to Keble's place that night. He's away, but there's a lot of my stuff there, and he left the key with me. So it's boots and saddles for the Dunhams! Luckily we have only a cat to worry amout . ."

Afterwards, when she was alone, phrases came back to her. "Luckily we have only a cat to worry about!" For some reason these particular words came back to her, and hurt her more, stirred her more deeply to anger and shame than some of the more significant ones. "Luckily we have only a cat to worry about!"

This from Kent, who in the early stages of their friendship had said to her briefly, unemotionally, more than once: "If we'd had kids, my wife and I! I wanted them, terribly. I wanted a little girl named Sheila, with a mop of hair and a blue smock. But Lilian's always been babied by her mother into thinking she wouldn't get through it. Well, I'm glad now," he had once added, "I'm glad now that there aren't children. Because if ever I have children I want them to be yours."

The quietly expressed feeling had sent a quiver through her, although he hadn't said it dramatically; he had been painting, in his old spattered smock, and she had gone into his studio quite casually, between the setting of the table for their supper and the moment when Lilian would call them for it. He and Lilian lived, had lived ever since she had know them, in an entirely commonplace flat. It had hurt her every time she went there to see how pathetically he tried to make the drawing room seem a studio; he would have liked a big barny loft somewhere, with a curtain across the bedroom corner and a skylight instead of the four small square rooms. In the room he called his studio, a window overlooked a goodsized airwell; Kent said that it had a north light. He had littered the room with sketches and canvases; they were absurd enough, incongruous enough in that small space; he kept smock or two hanging there, and palettes, and big black tin boxes full of twisted paint tubes.

It had been on Jocelyn's first visit to his home, when she and his wife had been complete strangers, and had handled each other with great circumspection, that pity had begun in her heart for Kent. Before that her feeling had been all admiration for the man who was a real—if only a commercial—artist; a growing affection for him as the friend who stopped in to visit her now and then in the office, and so obviously found her company stimulating.

Buses Return to 4th Street Transfer Point Tomorrow

END 5-MONTH STOP AT THIRD INTERSECTION

City, Bus Company Officials To Study Extensions In Schedules Tonight.

Buses of the Mansfield Rapid Transit company will return to their regular transfer point at the intersection of Fourth and Main streets at 5:15 a. m. tomorrow with only one exception to the former transfer schedules.

Announcement of return to the old transfer point was made this morning by G. F. Van Tilburg, transit company superintendent, after a conference with Mayor William J. Locke and Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton.

Van Tilburg said both officials had approved the return from the temporary transfer point at Third and Main which has been in use for approximately five months while the downtown section of Fourth street was closed for resurfacing.

Both the mayor and service director concurred in the transit company official's statements.

The city officials said use of the Fourth and Main intersection as the transfer point was set up in the bus company franchise.

Van Tilburg said that one change was contemplated in the transfer schedule. The Glessner avenue-Reformatory bus will stop hereafter on Main street rather than on Fourth. This, it was explained, would eliminate an inconvenient left turn.

According to Mayor Locke the change also enables the city to use 51 feet of additional parking space on each side of Fourth street while granting the bus company only an extra 27 feet on Main for bus parking.

Meanwhile a meeting of city council's utilities committee headed by Russel D. Porch with officials of the bus company was scheduled for 7:30 tonight.

Meeting plans, disclosed last night by Porch when a petition was presented to council from residents in southeast Mansfield requesting extension of bus service to include their neighborhood, called for study of the extension request.

The petition bearing the signatures of approximately 90 persons asked that bus service be extended to include Chilton, Harter and Raleigh avenues. Other members of council's committee are Arthur L. Croak and Fred Miller.

OHIO CONGRESSMAN SUGGESTS ANALYSIS OF NATIONAL DEBT

WASHINGTON—INS—A resolution calling for appointment of a congressional committee to investigate and report on the financial structure of the nation was introduced in the house by Rep. Smith (R., Ohio) today.

Smith's resolution suggested the committee be composed of nine representatives who would include members of the ways and means, the banking and currency, and the coinage, weights and measures committees.

The Ohioan introduced the resolution after making public more than 50 pages of research on the history of state of the war in the declared it appeared to the subject of the public debt had become almost taboo in the house chamber.

"I do not want the title of alarmist," Smith asserted, "but I believe that there are among us in congress today those who would rather forget than attempt to debate a small problem such as, shall we say, the subject of the 'national debt.'"

Smith's study of the financial position of the nation included research on the federal debt, condition of bank credit, and "the political confiscation of the product of labor, and its arbitrary redistribution by means of grants, payments, subsidies, etc."

"It is no part of this discussion to lay the blame for our trouble to any particular political party," Smith told the house. "It has its root crops so deep in the past that it now is impossible to trace all of them to their sources, much less locate them in individuals or political parties."

REPORT UNITED STATES ASKS 110 PLANES HELD BY FRANCE

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The United States, it was learned reliably today, has asked France to return to this country the 110 war planes that it purchased just before its defeat by Germany. The planes are now in the West Indian island of Martinique.

This, according to a source in close touch with the matter, was the main subject of President Roosevelt's conference yesterday with Gaston Henri-Haye, the French ambassador. The matter of Washington's relations with the government of Marshal Henri Petain in Vichy, less than cordial lately, also was discussed.

It is not known whether the envoy gave the president any definite assurances as to whether the planes would be turned over to an American mission, if one called at Martinique to collect them.

Presumably he is referring the matter to his chiefs at Vichy. But he emphasized, in talking with reporters later, the cordial and friendly nature of his conversation with the president.

Meanwhile, both the state department and the White House denied reports that Vichy has asked this government's agreement to improvement of naval facilities at Martinique. Press reports from Vichy saying that France planned new installations there were regarded in informed Washington circles as a "trial balloon."

The airplanes, return of which America is asking, were made in this country, but were shipped from a Canadian port aboard the French aircraft carrier Bearn just before the fall of Paris. The carrier was on the high seas when its commander learned by wireless of France's defeat.

The commander headed for the French-controlled port of Martinique, where his ship joined a cruiser and a flotilla of smaller vessels. When British naval intelligence learned that they were there, warships were sent to blockade the port and see that the French boats and their valuable cargo of planes, and about $250,000,000 in gold, did not escape to fall later, perhaps, into German hands. The British flotilla, holding the French in a trap, has been there ever since.

GAIN OF 26

Chamber of Commerce Workers Report on New Members.

Announcement that 26 new members had been enrolled in the Chamber of Commerce since the opening this week of the 28th annual membership drive was made at a luncheon meeting for campaign workers this noon at the Mansfield Leland hotel.

Two 100 point teams were also announced by John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Chamber, at the meeting. First team included L. B. Hamilton and L. J. Ott, and the second, Aaron Goldsmith and Fred Wolford.

Honorary chairman of the drive is Paul M. Eliot, past president of the organization. John B. Conard is co-chairman.

Officials of the chamber expect to boost the membership this year to 700. More than 650 were enrolled in 1939.

INDUCT 18 NEW HI-Y MEMBERS

Eighteen new members were taken into the John Sherman Hi-Y club at an induction service held at the Y. M. C. A. last night.

Report Mexican Rebels Destroy Railroad Bridges

MEXICO CITY—(U.P.)—A government spokesman said today rebels, apparently followers of Brig. Gen. Andres Zarzoza who was slain in a street battle at Monterrey, had destroyed several bridges recently in the Monterrey area and that the plot had assumed "really serious proportions."

He said order had been restored completely with Zarzoza's death and the dispersal of his followers by soldiers and police in a raid on their meeting place. Before the raid, however, the spokesman said, the rebels had planned to cut communications lines "and if they had succeeded they might have been joined by bands from several small towns."

The destroyed bridges, he said, were on a railway line from Monterrey to Saltillo, and on a line north from Monterrey, connecting with the transcontinental route at Laredo, Tex.

Gen. Jesus Augustin Castro, secretary of national defense, said the same swift punishment administered to Zarzoza, a follower of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, who claims to be president-elect, awaited any other "so-called rebels."

BUILDING VALUATION CLIMBS CLOSE TO MILLION AND HALF

Building permits issued in Mansfield during September brought the total for the first nine months of the year to $1,433,693—just short of a million and a half dollars.

A survey of building records disclosed today that 1940 valuations were only about $517,000 less than the valuation figures for the corresponding period last year and at the present rate, may surpass the 1939 valuations. The nine-month total last year was $1,951,444.

Chief reason for the difference is the $1,000,000 school improvement program sponsored by the board of education during last year.

With the number of residences under construction this year slightly below the 1939 total, valuations in new home construction showed a decrease of approximately $249,000.

A total of 180 new homes have been started this year at an estimated cost of $906,550, as compared to 206 homes valued at $1,155,550 built during the same period in 1939.

Last month's building valuations were listed at $226,477 for all new construction, including permits for 28 new homes valued at $177,650.

Residential construction the past month was paced by the construction of three new apartment houses, one valued at $35,000, and two at $10,000 each.

SLIGHT DELAY

HAVANA —(INS)— The mayor of Holguin has complained to the Department of Interior that the Chaparra Light and Power company has threatened to discontinue service to the municipality. The message added there was no reason for the act "because the city owes the company only for seven months of service."

SHERIFF'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

The State of Ohio, Richland County, COMMON PLEAS COURT.

Wade Stanfield, Plaintiff, vs. Lloyd H. Ziegler and Evelyn Ziegler, Defendant. Case No. 25281.

These are actual headlines from last winter's Ohio newspapers . . . protect yourself and your family from the dangers of such weather this winter with SOHIO Guaranteed Starting!
DON'T SAY WE DIDN'T TELL YOU!

Before your next oil change ask yourself:

"Do I want to go through another winter without the protection of Guaranteed Starting?"

Don't be disappointed!

If you plan having your oil changed soon, don't make the mistake of changing to "just any oil." Last year many people who wanted the protection of SOHIO Guaranteed Starting for their cars made the mistake of changing oil with some other brand early in October. At the first cold snap several weeks later they came in to get the SOHIO Guarantee certificate: But, of course, the valuable protection of Guaranteed Starting comes only with the use of SOHIO products and service.

To avoid such disappointments, we are making this special early announcement: If you want the protection of SOHIO'S written starting guarantee all this coming winter, be sure to make your next oil change at SOHIO.

FREE—Get Guaranteed Starting With Just Regular Winter Precautions!

Motor oil, gear oil, gasoline, your battery winter-tested—that's all you need. No "red tape." You get our written certificate with just these regular SOHIO winter-grade products and our winter battery service.

That's why we say Guaranteed Starting is free—there's absolutely nothing extra to buy.

HOW YOU ARE PROTECTED

No matter how cold it gets from now until April 1, 1941, we guarantee your motor starts. If you ever fail to start, just call a garage to start your motor—and Standard Oil will pay the garage starting bill!

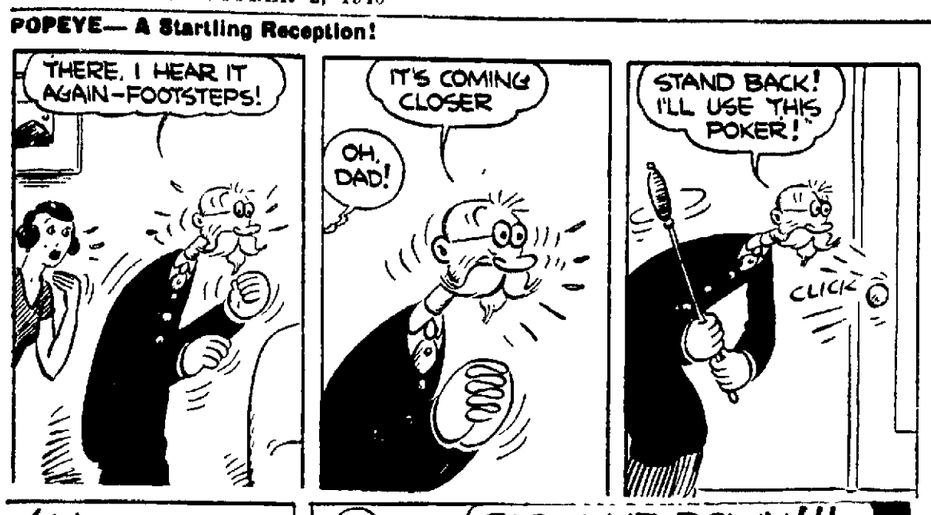
POPEYE— A Startling Reception!



PAM— "Save America!" By A. W. Brewerton

THERE! THAT'S STARTED THE BALL ROLLING, PAM, WHERE ARE THESE BILL NUMBERS YOU COPIED?
DAVID HAS JUST CALLED HIS OFFICE, GIVEN INSTRUCTIONS FOR A RAPID ROUND-UP OF SUSPECTS!
10-2
THEY'RE IN A NOTE-BOOK—IN THE DASH COMPARTMENT OF YOUR CAR!
IT WAS GORDON'S CAR THE GIRL'S HAD BEEN USING, YOU RECALL—HE WAS NOW DRIVING IT AGAIN!
WELL, WELL!
SUDDENLY DAVID GATHERED PAM INTO HIS ARMS, HELD HER CLOSE TO HIM!
YOU BLESSED GIRL! YOU MAY HAVE SAVED AMERICA!
THEN HE WAS GONE, LEAVING PAM GASPING AT HIS UNEXPECTED DISPLAY OF EMOTION!
I'LL CALL YOU SOON AS I KNOW RESULTS!
WILL PAM "SAVE AMERICA"? WILL THE LISTED MONEY BE FOUND ON THOSE SUSPECTS?

TRADERS STUDY STOCK TRENDS BEFORE BUYING

Irregular Price Movements Rule Market; Index of Power Shows Rise.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Irregular price movements ruled the stock market today as traders sought to determine probable trends.

Issues showing a degree of steadiness included DuPont, American Can, General Electric, Douglas, Air Reduction, Western Union, Anaconda and Case.

Bonds were mixed. Commodities fairly steady. The London market was firm in limited dealings.

Steel share holders noted a rise of 50 cents a ton in the price of heavy melting scrap.

October corporate borrowing plans occupied much of the financial district's attention, inasmuch as the month's program contemplates the largest offering of bond issues this year.

Industry's constantly increasing rate was signalized by a rise of 1.5 points in the Associated Press index of electric power production, placing this seasonally adjusted rate at 130.9—higher than last year's peak.

Freight carloadings were estimated for last week at 818,000, the highest point in the year.

BRITISH LOOK FOR NEW AXIS DRIVE ON SUEZ

Nazi Troops Sent to Africa as Germans Take Charge of Italian Forces.

proved state of British defenses. But Germany has continued to mass troops and ships at all of the channel ports from Zeebrugge and Ostend all the way down to Le Havre and Lorient and there has been no physical manifestation of any change in the carefully laid plans of the high command.

Disclosure of German participation in Premier Mussolini's Mediterranean offensive, however, gives a possible clue to the next step in Axis strategy and may explain why Hitler continues military concentrations along the channel which have given the Royal Air Force such tempting daily targets.

His object may be to keep the R. A. F. and the British navy so deeply engaged in the channel that a joint Italo-German thrust against the Suez canal can be carried out during the winter with comparatively little interference.

In this connection, the last speech of Prime Minister Winston Churchill to the house of commons is of considerable importance.

Delivered at a time when London was being heavily punished by German bombs and when the British capital was first feeling the full effects of a Nazi air "blitzkrieg," Churchill placed what seemed to be almost undue emphasis upon the Mediterranean situation.

He warned that possibility of an invasion was still imminent and called upon the people of British to steel themselves for endless terror, but at the same time he warned of a major battle in the middle east in the near future. He made known that British naval strength in the Mediterranean had been doubled and that military supplies were being convoyed to Alexandria in an unceasing stream.

German Activity In Africa Admitted

LONDON — (U.P.) — Military informants asserted today that the Germans apparently had taken charge of Italian military operations and added. "There is no reason why reports of German troop movements to Italy should not be true."

It was admitted that specific information was lacking of the arrival of German soldiers or war materials in Africa, but informants said:

"The German masters have taken de facto charge of Italian operations."

French Report Heavy Damage

VICHY, France— (U.P.) —Official French sources received advices today that severe casualties and damage had been inflicted by British bombing attacks on French ports along the English channel, especially at Le Havre.

At Le Havre alone 95 French civilians were reported killed and 200 wounded in addition to heavy German military casualties in the past two or three days.

Doctor Discloses Pestilence Threat Over All Europe

LONDON—(U.P.)—Dr. Joseph Barnes Burt, vice president of the physical medicine section of the Royal Society of Medicine, said in a speech at Bath today that unless every law of medicine was broken, a terrible pestilence would break out on the continent this winter.

"Fortunately we have the channel between us," he said, "but whether that will be sufficient to prevent a spread to England is another matter. With people herded together in dugouts without proper sanitation and people calling in on their friends, there will be great risk of an epidemic here."

Dr. Burt urged health authorities to act at once, regardless of expense, to prevent overcrowding in houses and shelters and in improving sanitation.

urged voters not to overlook the non-partisan judicial ballot on election day.

"Usually not more than 60 per cent of the voters take time to mark that ballot, and it is as important as the state and national tickets," he said.

City Clerk Bannick of Cleveland, charged that "the New Deal has taken emergency measures and made permanent political issues of them, with the politicians capitalizing on WPA, PWA, and other government emergency relief measures."

Citing the failure of President Woodrow Wilson to keep the nation out of the World war, Bannick added that "I am afraid the crowd in Washington is leading us to the same place today.

"It should be the effort of America to help end the war in Europe without sending men over there or antagonizing the rest of the world We have to stay out of that war now and save what's left of Chirstian civilization," Bannick said.

Praising Wendell L. Willkie for his successful climb to the nomination for president, Bannick said, "Some of the New Dealers have labeled him utility candidate, but fair-minded people don't criticize Americans for climbing to the top through their own efforts and intelligence."

Bettman, who spoke earlier in the evening in Shelby, was introduced by Glenn L. Bierly, while Philip Wolfe introduced Bannick

The rally which also included a musical program, was in charge of Berlyn McCready, president of the Willkie-Bricker-Burton club

Candidates for county offices were introduced by McCready. Thompson Jackson, Mansfield colored leader, spoke briefly on the issues in the national and state campaigns.

Next week's meeting of the Willkie-Bricker-Burton club will be held Friday night when Gov. Bricker will be the principal speaker. The rally will be in the Warner building.

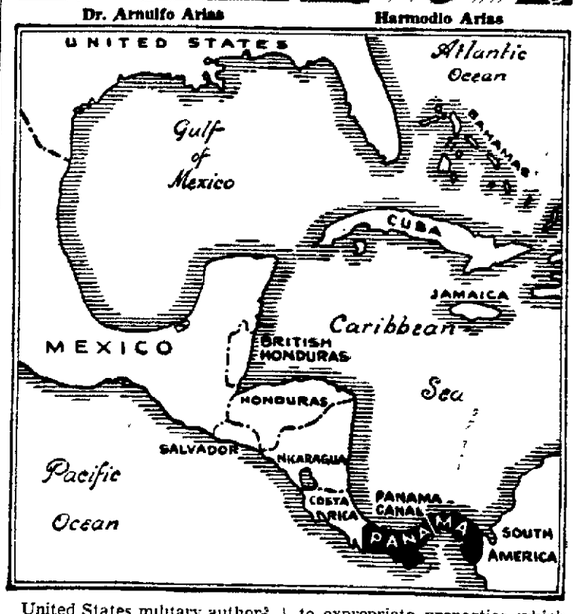
Panama to Go Totalitarian?

Dr. Arnulfo Arias

Harmodio Arias



United States military authorities are reported to be alarmed by indications in the republic of Panama (shown on map) that 40-year-old Dr. Arnulfo Arias, newly elected president, above left, intends to set up a totalitarian regime. Arias is reported favoring legislation that will enable the Panama government to expropriate properties which observers interpret is aimed at the American-owned Panama Utilities company and the U. S. army air base at Rio Hato. Upper right is the president's brother, Harmodio Arias, powerful newspaper publisher in the city of Panama who is reported in disagreement with his brother's proposed policies.

WILLKIE GIVES MAJOR SPEECH AT CLEVELAND

Brings Campaign to Ohio In Radio Address Tonight on Foreign Affairs.

slowly moved through the outskirts of Grand Rapids last night, a small pointed rock crashed through two panes of the diner—four cars from Willkie's private car—and scratched the hand of William C. Murphy, jr., chief of the Washington bureau of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The principal speech of Willkie's Michigan tour was at Grand Rapids where before a crowd estimated at 30,000 he charged that the New Deal had "cut the jugular vein of America" by discouraging production and creating unemployment. He promised jobs for 9,600,000 jobless in the nation.

"The road to prosperity is lined with jobs—and the way to get on that road is production," he said.

"There are 9,600,000 men unemployed and I intend to get them jobs—to put them back to work—to let the good black soil of America produce all that it can, and the factories manufacture all that we need because the consuming power of the nation has not yet been touched, and with jobs this consuming power will be released."

During his campaign through Ohio Willkie will attempt to win that state's 26 electoral votes which were cast for Mr. Roosevelt both in 1932 and 1936. Ohio elected a Republican governor in 1938.

His first Ohio stop was Sylvania at 10:50 a. m. and he detrained there to drive to Toledo for a noon address. He will rejoin his train at Toledo and make rear platform appearances at Oak Harbor at 2:20 p. m. Sandusky at 3:10 p. m. and Elyria at 4:05 p. m.

Ohio Candidates Ride with Willkie

TOLEDO—(U.P.)—His campaign train brought Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee, back into Ohio today to stump for the big block of 26 electoral votes he hopes his one-time "home" state will deliver to him at the November election.

Willkie's first stop this side of the Michigan-Ohio line was at the village of Sylvania where he was to detrain and drive to Toledo for a noon address.

Ohio Republican leaders flocked from all corners of the state to greet the candidate on his two-day swing through the state and a number of them will make brief speeches in his behalf as he travels across the state.

Governor Bricker and Mayor Harold H. Burton, of Cleveland, the G. O. P. senatorial nominee, planned to meet Willkie in Toledo and to travel on the campaign special as far as Cleveland. Sen. Robert A. Taft also was to accompany Willkie if duties in Washington would permit.

Willkie, one-time Akron lawyer, has set a rigorous speaking schedule for himself across Ohio, evidence of the importance he attaches to the political potency of the state. On this first swing he takes his campaign fight into several of the big industrial cities where Roosevelt sentiment is expected to be strong.

Later he expects to return for a swing through central and southern Ohio.

Willkie will re-board his train at Toledo and en route to Cleveland for the evening rally he will make back platform appearances at Oak Harbor, Sandusky and Elyria. Arriving in Cleveland he will be driven up Euclid avenue and through the business district of the city to his hotel.

The special leaves Cleveland tomorrow and will pause at Niles, birthplace of President William McKinley. Youngstown will be the last stop with a short talk and a possible tour of one or two steel mills before leaving for Pennsylvania.

ATTACK CONVOY

British Planes Swoop Down on German Ships.

DOVER, Eng.—(ANS)—A German convoy half-shrouded in mist was attacked by British shore batteries and Royal Air Force planes today.

With fast motor torpedo-boats ahead and astern, the convoy was sighted by watchers along the coast. A British fighter formation immediately took off to bomb the ships while shore batteries opened fire, scoring at least one direct hit.

The convoy was last seen zigzagging frantically to get out of range. British dive-bombers then joined in the attack close to the French coast.

JAPAN WORRIED BY BURMA ROAD

British and American Steps Arouse Alarm in Press of Nipponese.

Malaya and copper from Canada were involved and Japan would not feel any pinch.

"Britain apparently knows what a serious situation would arise if such an embargo were extended to the Malay peninsula," Asahi commented, "and therefore it is unlikely that Britain would take such a step lightly and recklessly."

It is urgently necessary, Yomiuri said, that the Japanese goverment take positive steps, unrestrained because of past difficulties, to anticipate a prospective American diplomatic advance toward Russia.

Asahi and Hochi said that Russia should abandon its policy of assistance to China, and thus remove an obstacle to really good relations with Japan.

BERLIN SHAKEN BY 4 TERRIFIC BLASTS IN RAID

Royal Air Force Continues Aerial Offensive Upon German Objectives.

One violent explosion followed and as the pilots came away "a vast pall of black smoke remained over the blazing target."

One pilot, after dropping bombs at Sterkrade, near Dusseldorf in the Ruhr valley industrial area, went on to the Fokker works at Amsterdam — which had been bombed previously—and "emptied a load there."

Two waves of bombing planes attacked the oil storage center of Gelsenkirchen in Prussia with high explosives and incendiaries starting fires and causing many explosions. Fires and explosions also followed an attack on Cologne, the ministry said.

The Cologne power station was attacked and the ministry said that "two particularly big fires were reported glowing in the darkness."

Electric power stations at Duisberg and oil stations at Holten also were attacked.

An air ministry communique said that the British bombers also attacked freight yards at Hamm, Soest, Westerholt, Gremberg and Coblenz the railway junctions at Sterkrade and Holten canal docks in the Ruhr, an aircraft factor; at Rotterdam and "several enemy airdromes."

"The ports of Rotterdam, Flushing, Dunkirk, Boulogne, Calais, and Le Havre and gun emplacements near Cap Gris Nez were heavily bombed," the communique said. "Three of our aircraft have not reported to their base."

While the British bombers were raiding Berlin, other points in Germany and German bases in France and Holland the attacks on channel ports, possible invasion bases, were seen from English shores.

Last night's raids marked the second consecutive period of intensive attacks on German military objectives inside the reich and in occupied countries. The day before the British struck not only at Berlin but at widely scattered points in Germany, including factories, oil plants and communications.

Germans Attack In New Ferocity

LONDON — (U P) — German air squadrons attacked with increased strength and ferocity during five air raid alarms today but only a few Nazi planes fought their way past diving British defense planes and dropped bombs on the London area.

British fighter planes roaming the skies at a great altitude, made screaming "surprise" dives on the German raiders and drove most of them back across the coast.

Nazi raiders which escaped the roaring counter-attack were forced to lower altitudes, where British anti-aircraft guns hammered at them furiously.

A number of bombs were dropped on the capital, especially in a southeast section, during the fourth air raid alarm, causing some damage and casualties.

During the fifth alarm, three more bombs crashed into the same district.

Some of the German fleets were turned back over the coast by fighter squadrons.

Only 20 German planes penetrated to the London area during the morning. They dropped bombs on two southeastern districts.

Observers saw German plane formations over the eastern southeastern and southwestern suburbs, with British fighter planes crashing them, their machine guns rattling.

A blast from big anti-aircraft guns drove off German fleets which attacked the capital during the night, and to the astonishment of Londoners, now inured to night-long attacks, there was a lull in the early morning hours.

Damage was reported to only one street in central London, though 15 outer districts and eight towns in southeast England were bombed.

Fire bombs were dropped in the eastern London suburbs and incendiary and high explosive bombs caused damage and casualties in the southern and southeastern outskirts. A hospital in East London was hit by a high explosive bomb but there were no casualties.

Northwest England suffered most damage during the night, and there were casualties in four towns in the area.

There were casualties in a town in the Liverpool area last night when the high explosive bombs were dropped as townspeople were leaving movie houses. One incendiary bomb only was dropped on Liverpool and it did no damage.

Shelling England

This photo, passed by the German censor, is described as a view of one of the big German guns which are shelling the English coast from the coast of France. The Dover area of England has frequently been under fire.

EXTENSION TELEPHONES COST LITTLE ARE WORTH MUCH!

Costs Him $50 and Jewelry for 'Magic Belt' Treatment

A smooth-talking woman who used a "magic belt" to "cure" the lingering illness of Joseph Polito, 273 Eighth avenue, failed to cure Polito, but the belt made his $50 in cash and all the family jewelry disappear, Sheriff E. P. Long learned today.

Although Polito lost his money and valuables several days ago, he did not report the ruse to the sheriff, and it was a neighbor woman who first told officers of the trick.

Officers said the woman, who spoke English and Italian fluently, told Polito if he put his money and valuables in a belt she supplied and left it around his waist for a certain number of days, his illness would be cured.

He followed her instructions and she left. After the required number of days, he removed the belt, but found only wads of paper and other useless articles in the belt pouches where he had placed $50, two gold rings, a silver watch, two gold watch chains, and a locket.

Polito, who has been ill for several months, said the money and jewelry represented his entire personal belongings except for his household goods.

OIL TANK FIRE

BUCYRUS—Bucyrus fire department worked for approximately one hour at noon Tuesday to extinguish a fire in a huge crude oil storage tank on the Sozonian Vault company property on North Sandusky avenue. Oil clinging to the sides and a small quantity of oil in the bottom of the tank became ignited as workmen were dismantling the tank preparatory to selling it for junk.

Uncensored Press Guards Freedom

OBSERVANCE of "National Newspaper Week" is a new thing in America. There have been numberless other specially designated "days" or "weeks" to which newspapers of the United States, or in various states or communities, have given much space, but about themselves, and the part they play in national, state and community life, they have said little.

Now, however, when "freedom of the press" has been blacked-out in many parts of the world by totalitarian edict and aggression, it appears timely that newspapers of the United States—still free from the restraint of dictatorship—should unite in directing attention of the American people to the fact that preservation of the rights of free speech and a free press are vital to personal liberties and national freedom.

"Freedom of the press," it should be more generally understood, involves no special privileges to those who publish newspapers. It means that the readers of those newspapers are protected in their rights to learn what is going on in their community, their state, their nation—and the entire world—without bias, falsification or censorship.

"Freedom of the press" and "freedom of speech" are closely associated in the first article of the Bill of Rights, and also link directly with the constitutional guarantee of religious liberty.

These three stand together in marking the important differences between democracy and any form of over-government which infringes on the liberties of law abiding individuals or minority groups.

In the safeguarding of these human rights newspapers of the United States have stood through many years as a dependable line of defense, because of the freedom of expression that has been accorded them under the Constitution.

Newspapers, being dependent on human agencies for their production, sometimes make mistakes and are frequently criticized by readers, but day after day they continue in an earnest effort to get accurate information and print facts, whether in small local items or news of worldwide importance.

Among the first steps toward establishing a dictatorship is destruction of a free press, as was done in Russia, Germany, Italy, and other countries that have fallen under totalitarian rule.

This was easy in Russia, largely populated by illiterate peasants only a generation out of serfdom; not so easy in Germany and Italy where resistance was finally overcome by brute strength of military groups and where only dictator-inspired propaganda is now available to newspaper readers.

Looking back upon the fate of France it can be seen that the gallant French people had been lulled into a sense of false security by suppression of facts they should have known but which were hidden by members of their government.

Of all people, those who live in the United States have been in best position to learn of happenings in this country, in Europe, Japan, South America, or anywhere else in what has heretofore been known as "the civilized world."

The 1,900 daily newspapers printed in English in the United States total circulations approximating 40,000,000 each day—spreading information, pictures, entertainment, uncensored news, and each joining whole-heartedly in contributing to the welfare and progress of its own community. In addition to these there are about 11,000 weekly newspapers, each serving its more limited field in a creditable way and symbolizing the spirit of individual freedom which has made America great.

It was Thomas Jefferson who said: "Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost."

As you read your newspaper this week, and hereafter, take time to think of it as convincing proof of your right, as an American citizen, to learn about what is going on, free from government censorship, and without favoritism to any political party or group.

And realize, too, that continuance of an unfettered press is vitally essential to preservation of the American system of government.

Domestic and World Affairs

AMERICANS find it hard to believe that our own affairs are not the most important things in the world. It is a natural feeling, because our country is so big, strong, populous and varied that we feel like a world in ourselves. Yet there are times when we may be mistaken.

"Domestic questions are of secondary importance these days" insists an easterner visiting the middle west. "No matter what they concern, they do not approach in importance the problems of foreign relations."

If Britain can hold out for a few months, he says, say until next spring, the United States may then have an interval of about a year to perfect its defenses. If Britain suddenly collapsed, we might not have even six months to get ready.

This observer is sure we're going to get into the war, no matter how we feel about it. We're in now, he insists. And he wishes our labor people could talk with the French workmen, who were so confident and well fed and now have very little food. They had taken three meals a day for granted. He thinks the most dangerous part of the situation here is our taking so much for granted.

Richland County Free of Debt

AT A TIME when the federal debt is climbing to new heights and thrift carries a degree of opprobrium, mixed emotions greet the startling announcement that Richland county has wiped out the last of its bonded indebtedness—having paid off $2,500,000 in bonds since 1925.

Under any rules that prevailed prior to the advent of what has become known as the New Deal, such an accomplishment would have been regarded as highly commendable and encomiums would have been showered upon county commissioners and any others who shared in the noteworthy achievement.

Now, however, there is doubt as to just how such a thing should be treated—except that taxpayers may still be sufficiently old-fashioned as to think well of it.

And, speaking for the taxpayers—who seem to need someone to occasionally keep them in mind—it appears entirely proper to give a word of praise to the business-like way in which the affairs of Richland county are being conducted.

Hatch Act Puts Million 'On Spot'

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—When a law put more than a million people on the spot, it's worth digging into.

If you know a hundred persons, the odds are you know someone who is affected by the Hatch act. Those affected are, for the first time really, finding themselves definitely on the spot.

In the national defense melee you may have missed all the hullabaloo about the Hatch act and its amendments. It is the statute which forbids, on pain of instant dismissal, any government employe or the employe of any state or local project financed in part or in whole by government funds from participating in almost any way in party politics.

Border Cases Must Wait.

THAT includes so many people that the civil service commission, which is charged with administering the act and prosecuting it in so far as civil service employes are concerned (something like 750,000) can't begin to enumerate the borderline cases. These won't be classified probably until the courts (on appeal from hearings) have had a whack at interpreting the law.

There are borderline violations, too, which hardly can be imagined until court precedence is established, but it won't take that to prove that the Hatch act has teeth. It has fangs in rows, and they are so sharp that any federal worker who gets over the years without getting his hide ripped off on them will have to pick his political way with caution.

The amended Hatch act (it's only a little more than two months old) not only made political activity verboten but provided for the civil service commission to define "political activity." It was no dictionary job, you can bet, and it is just now that Chairman Harry B. Mitchell of the commission has gotten around to pointing out to the federal thousands just where some of these big, bad teeth are.

Can't Talk About It.

FOR instance, any government worker caught on the job even discussing whether Wendell Willkie or F. D. R. will be the next president may find himself in the army of the unemployed forthwith. Under the Constitution, congress can't take away the right of free speech off the job, but on the job—that's different.

A Hatch acter's free speech, even off the job, doesn't include making political speeches seconding motions in political assemblies, saying yea or nay in political conventions, or otherwise talking out of turn about anything that has to do with party politics.

Elections bets are out and to such an extent that even wagering a marshmallow flip on whether the sheriff will get in again might turn out to be one's cause of departure.

There'll be no more flute-tooting at political rallies either—that is, unless the worker is a member of a band that plays for hire and the politicians hire it in the regular manner.

If government workers love a parade and the parade is political, they'll have to take it from the sidewalk . . . not from the reviewing stand or the line of march. They can't wear or distribute buttons or badges, pass out campaign literature, fiddle with campaign funds.

Can't Work at Polls.

THEY can't serve at polls or give voting Johnnies a lift in the old jaloppy. They can't write letters to the editor or articles either—not even if they sign them simply "Loyal American."

This is only a handful of the Hatch acter's dont's, but even these should serve to show why a million-odd federal workers are on a spot this election year they never were on before.

Listen World!

Your Newspaper

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THIS has been selected as Newspaper Week. What'm I going to say about it? Perhaps it would be quite a scoop if I simply told the truth!

Newspapers—commonest thing in anyone's daily life. But did you ever stop to think what a newspaper really is in 1940: what it means to YOU? Chances are you haven't. If you've thought of it at all, you've probably accepted the Hollywood version of us Front Page Boys and Girls.

Tough Guys, be we male or female—that's the way we're usually represented. Hard-boiled Babies with turned-up collars, talking out of the corners of our mouths, viewing events with a cynical eye. Then saying what we please regardless of vital statistics. Raising Cain with the truth . . . slinging mud, regardless. That's the movie version.

And a mighty alluring picture, says I. Twould be almost as good as belonging to a circus, to work on a job like that. But, alas and alack, it just doesn't happen to be true.

Newspapers—and newspaper writers—aren't like that. Not that journalists and columnists don't meet up with spectacular experiences, exciting, hilarious, horrible and tragic experiences. And record them with fireworks, as per your personal order. But that's only a sliver of what newspaper work does and means today.

We've seen many an amazing change in these last 40 years, but none more deep or dynamic than this business of newspaper writing. Time was when popular journalism rated somewhere between a strip-tease burlesque and a dish of prunes. And all reporters were supposed to be a lot of high-tension gabblers who fortified their natural enthusiasm with gallons of hard likker, provided they could find somebody to pay for it. But those days are blacked-out forever. Today there's no more industrious or reliable outfit in the whole working world than the Newspaper Gang.

THE COLUMNISTS OF TODAY ARE THE EXPLORERS CRUSADERS, EDUCATORS PASTORS AND PRIESTS OF A BEWILDERED WORLD. THEY ANALYZE CONDITIONS . . . EXPLAIN POLICIES . . . START CAMPAIGNS . . . HEAR CONFESSIONS . . . DETERMINE THE TREND OF HISTORY WHICH YOU PROCEED TO BUY FOR A FEW CENTS!

No, I'm neither boasting, boosting nor beefing. Just giving you the Low Down on the most alluring of all careers—that of the "Fourth Estate." Never was a service more envied, or less understood, than this job of talking to You All. And never was one tougher on the Talkers. For regardless of age or arthritis, they have to play leap-frog in a changing world and keep one jump ahead of each current somersault.

Look at your paper with new eyes when you see it tomorrow. Dollars to doughnuts you've never thought what those crammed sheets really mean . . . or the appalling power that lies behind their fresh-inked words.

NO FACTOR IN YOUR DAILY EXISTENCE CARRIES SUCH TREMENDOUS RESPONSIBILITY . . . RUNS SUCH RISKS . . . DEMANDS SUCH STEADY ACCURATE SERVICE . . . AS THAT DAILY SHEET. MEET YOUR NEWSPAPER!

Men and women gambling their lives for it in war-torn lands. During blitzkriegs. Trailing spies and assassins. Laying in crater holes with the dead and dying. Other men are pouring into its whirling space all their passion and power . . . translating plain facts into flame and fury. Its presses are dipped in more than ink. Blood and tears and sweat mingle with that ink. Hour after hour those presses roar, registering an old world's destruction, plotting a new world's growth, molding YOUR future!

"Only a printed page?" No—it is the key to all you want to be. All for three cents—"Your Paper!"

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Saturday, Oct. 2, 1920.

Platoon system was adopted by Mansfield fire department, in accordance with new state law.

Anton Dorner, 51, died at his home, 281 East Fourth street.

Dr. J. H. McElhinney, former Mansfield resident, was here from California for a visit.

Mrs. George Swank, 82, died at her home on Bulkley avenue.

Community Chest offices reported prompt payment of pledges by subscribers.

Son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dillon, Newville road.

Donald Scott, Spring street, underwent appendicitis operation at General hospital.

Elizabeth Rohlen, Greenwood avenue, entertained little friends at birthday party.

FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY

Wednesday, Oct. 2, 1935.

Albert Benson was named superintendent of the St. Mark's Lutheran Sunday school for 13th consecutive year.

Fifty-two persons interested in organizing mixed choir under sponsorship of Parent Teachers' associations attended the first meeting.

The price of wheat in Mansfield reached a new high for the year. Mansfield mills were paying $1 a bushel.

Harold Patton, Donald Zelenka and David Martin were enrolled in Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh.

Major J. L. Zimmerman was elected commander of the Earl Mercy Post, No. 16, American Legion.

Aviation Fuel Still Goes to Japan, Appeasement Hope Delayed Ban

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The new iron and steel scrap embargo finally shut off one of Japan's key military supplies. But few know that the door still is wide open for another equally vital war material which is supposed to be under a drastic ban.

On July 26 the president set up a licensing system on exports of high-test aviation gasoline. Aimed chiefly at Japan, this move has been effective—as far as it goes. It has stopped the flow of top U. S. aviation fuel to Nipponese war planes.

But through a loophole as big as a barn door, Japan has been able, despite this supposedly stringent embargo, to obtain all the U. S. gas it needs for the bombers that are raining death and destruction on helpless Chinese cities and villages. This loophole is the little-noticed provision that limits the embargo only to a certain super-grade of gas—87 octane and over.

This type of fuel is essential for modern aerial warfare. Without it planes are not able to attain the great speeds necessary in dog fights and raids such as take place night and day over Britain.

But Japan is not up against that kind of battling. Its bombers and fighter planes face no aerial opposition. They have the skies to themselves. They don't need super-gas. They can do just as well on lower octane fuel. Their job is no different than an ordinary transport plane's. They haul out a load of bombs, dump it and fly back.

And so, with high octane gas barred, the Japs have been using what they could get—and have continued their ruthless bombing without interruption.

The story is told in the following unpublished government figures. In the month after the imposition of the so-called embargo, Japan imported from the United States 187,026 barrels of lower grade gasoline, or more than 20 per cent of all such exports during that period.

Military experts say that Japanese planes, if necessary, can use ordinary motor fuels as long as they are not required to operate at very high speeds.

* * *

Scrap Author.

REAL instigator of the airtight scrap embargo was not the war, navy or state department. It was a civilian—Defense Commissioner Leon Henderson.

Also, although the embargo coincided with European and Far Eastern developments, its original motivation was not diplomatic but economic.

On August 30, Henderson sent the president a memorandum strongly urging a "complete embargo on exports of all grades of iron and steel scrap." He advised this on two grounds: (1) to meet the rapidly mounting demands of the defense program; (2) to combat a sky-rocketing of prices.

Roosevelt agreed with Henderson on his arguments, but held up action in order not to offend Japan.

Aware that the Axis was secretly pressuring Tokyo to enter an alliance, the president purposely allowed Japan to obtain several hundred tons of scrap in the hope of warding off a Nazi-Jap tie-up. Not until it became clear that this appeasement policy was futile, did he turn to Henderson's proposal and crack down on scrap iron shipments.

New Children.

FOR 21 years Justice Felix Frankfurter and his wife, the former Marion Denman, have led a very happy but childless married life. When Frankfurter taught at the Harvard law school his home was the meeting place of students. And as a supreme court justice in Washington, young people still come to his home. But the Frankfurters have no children of their own.

Now, however, they are taking three refugee children into their home. They are the grandchildren of Gilbert Murray, famous English writer and scholar.

The children are aged 3, 11 and 12—considerably younger than the young government attorneys whom the Frankfurters are accustomed to entertaining.

Axis Strategy.

THE NEW strategy of the Axis powers is to concentrate against British forces in the Mediterranean during the winter months when gales lash the shores of the United Kingdom. Mediterranean moves probably will take the following lines:

1. Hitler will occupy the rest of France, which will give him important French ports on the Mediterranean, such as Toulon and Marseilles.
2. Acting in co-operation with Spain, Hitler and Mussolini will launch a drive against Gibraltar and probably will be able to take it.
3. Italian forces will bomb the Suez Canal from the air in an attempt to damage it sufficiently so that British ships cannot pass through. This would bottle up the British fleet in the Mediterranean.
4. Italian and Nazi forces will attempt a drive through the Near East, cutting off British oil supplies in Mosul and Iraq.

While United States observers abroad have pretty good information that this is the Axis program, the question of whether it will succeed is another matter. The proposed operations in France, Spain and Gibraltar probably will be successful, but the drive on Egypt and the Near East is not so simple.

So far the Italians have not shown the ability to do it alone, and if they are to succeed they will need major support from Hitler.

Warships to Far East.

MOST important question now under discussion inside the Navy Department is whether to make use of the giant British naval base at Singapore by accepting a British offer to station part of the United States fleet there.

Opinion inside the Navy is divided, but it looks certain that a compromise will be worked out whereby a squadron of cruisers and destroyers would make a tour of Australia, New Zealand, Singapore, possibly even the Dutch East Indies.

Officially this would be a good-will tour, though its real purpose would be a "stop, look and listen" warning to Japanese militarists now itching to grab the rich colonial possessions of France, Holland and England in the Pacific.

The plan of sending United States warships to the Far East is a part of the entire Roosevelt policy of strengthening the American stand in regard to Japan, since the deal on British island bases leaves the Atlantic coast in a far better condition of defense.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

SAN JUAN, P. R.—It doesn't take you very long to learn that life in this city has all the variety and color of a Spanish shawl. Its symbols are rosaries, cock fights, lotteries, sugar, and rum. Its speech is bi-lingual; its philosophy European.

When you lean against a gun emplacement in time-pitted El Morro you are standing in 16th century Spain. When a waterfront juvenile edges out of a crowd and pleads "Centavos, Amigo," what he hopes you will give him is a Buffalo nickel. Or a Lincoln penny. The natives in Puerto Rica think all turistas are rich. A young girl can fashion no more romantic a dream than that of marrying an American husband.

The young girls in San Juan have uniformly pretty faces, but their figures are not always attractive. So many of them possess little pot-tummies. This I am told is the penalty of an almost daily diet of rice and beans, a popular dish in Puerta Rica. Girls from the inland or mountain districts of the island are more stately in bearing. From early childhood they are taught to walk with bundles and baskets on their heads. This gives them a sense of queenliness not known to their coastal sisters.

THE lingo in the San Juan streets is picturesque and often extravagantly gracious. A hack driver will point to his brokendown vehicle and cry, "Senor, here is the most luxurious car between here and Ponce." . . . A waterfront hawker of land crabs will stop you with, "Here you are, my good man. Here are the finest crabs that have ever been produced in the entire Caribbean area." . . . A young pineapple planter, in town for the day, will gaze at a pretty girl crossing the street and sigh, "Ave Maria, surely St. Peter has opened the gates of Heaven for here the angels are walking in the streets."

The most delicious dessert I have ever tasted is Coco pie, as served at the Condado. It is made of coconut, but in no sense does it resemble our own coconut pie at home. In taste it may be described only as something clear out of this world. I have dropped a little note of congratulations to the chef, and I hope he honors me with the recipe.

You see lobster on most of the menus, but the tropic lobsters are soft and mushy, and are not to be compared with those from colder New England waters. Beef here is high, and sometimes you pay 80 cents a pound for chicken. But the fruit is abundant and unparalleled in quality. Today I saw a pineapple as large as a small child. My waiter called it a sugar-fruit. When sliced and frozen it dissolves in your mouth.

* * *

ICE melts faster here than any place I ever saw. Bar prices are much cheaper than in the States. . . . I know a place where you can buy beautifully tailored white summer suits for $5.75. . . . Another item of Puerto Rican handcraft are women's purses, made from cuttings of women's stockings. . . . The cuttings are rolled and then woven by hand. . . . A prime gift suggestion for men are linen handkerchiefs with your signature embroidered.

One of the restaurants here serves you a bright red hibiscus in a separate dish with every order. This is an attractive trick that restaurants in New York might well adopt.

A Farmer's Diary

Testing Chimneys

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

MY OLD FRIEND'S farmhouse was the scene of much activity as I drove up. A tall spurt of flame shot up from the main central chimney. While the family watched from the lawn, a young man who sat astride the roof, placed a board over the top of a second chimney where smoke was pouring forth.

"What's going on here?" I asked the gray-haired farmer.

"Ma got cold and said we should fire up the furnace, so the boys and I decided to test the chimneys while we was about it," he explained. "That'n in the middle gets clogged up every so often and has to burn out. If we let it go until some winter day when we're firin' heavy — and needin' to—it might set the place afire. Now while the boys are at home is a good time to tend to it.

"We wanted to test that old fireplace chimney for leaks. So Jim's puttin' a board over on top, and the other boy's in the attic watchin' for curls of smoke that might show where there's danger. He's got a trowel and a bit of quick cement along, to daub the chinks."

"Do you do this every year?" I wondered.

"Yes, we aim to. That way, we're sure in case of fire, that 'twasn't no way our fault. This big old house'd make quite a blaze, and it's all the home we've got. Another thing, we like to keep it warm in wintertime, without worryin' about fire hazard."

"What do you burn?" I asked.

"Both wood and coal in the furnace," he replied. "The fireplace takes four foot wood, and we burn the knotty crooked pieces there."

"And what for cooking?"

He smiled peculiarly. "Well, I'll tell ye we've got three cook stoves. My wife got a Pyrofax range three years ago. That did right well until last year when the electric line came through and she wanted an electric cooker. So I got her one. Ma's a good cook—takes prizes at the fair—and we like to eat.

But——"

"But what?"

He chuckled. "She never takes down the old wood range in the summer kitchen. More'n half the time we eat out there, the year around. She does the bakin' there, and the washin' and butcherin' and cannin'. 'Pears like them two fine stoves inside the house is more to pretty up the kitchen with than anything else. But it's all right with me, so long as it suits mother. She says the wood stove is like an old friend, she's had it so long. She wouldn't feel like keepin' house without it."

ESTIMATES COST OF SPAN REPAIR JOB AT $1,800

Statler Compiles Figures on South Mulberry Bridge 'Noise' Elimination.

City officals had before them today estimates totalling $1,800 for the repair of the South Mulberry street viaduct.

The figures were compiled by City Engineer W. C. Statler for resurfacing the structure to eliminate the noise caused by loose flooring.

Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton said the estimate would be turned over to council and that funds would be asked to make the repairs before winter.

He said George Berg, chairman of council's street committee had already looked over the projected work and expressed the opinion that it could be financed.

Street department workers recently "experimented" with a black top sealing surface at the north end of the bridge following an unsuccessful attempt by structural workers to "tie down" the loose planking.

Crafton said that residents in the vicinity of the viaduct had complained of the noise caused by the loose boards. Inspection by engineers several months ago disclosed that the sub flooring was also loose and that the constant wear by traffic might strain the bridge supports.

Although it is anticipated that street department workers will handle the job, a $500 item for labor is included in the estimate prepared by Statler.

Crafton said, however, that the item might be eliminated reducing the total cost of the job to approximately $1,300 including purchase of the black top surface.

UNIVERSITY WOMEN CONDUCT ANNUAL TEA

Fellowship Program Presented By the Misses Hainer, Scott and Ross; Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Endriss In Charge.

THE ANNUAL fellowship tea of the American Association of University Women was held yesterday afternoon at Westbrook Country club from 4 until 6 o'clock with approximately 135 members and guests in attendance. Mrs. John W. Graham and Mrs. Paul Endriss were in charge of the arrangements.

Tea was served from two long tables, decorated with tall yellow tapers and low arrangements of autumn flowers. The Misses Ruth Dunham, Beatrice McLees, Pearl Danback and Emma Waring poured. Music was furnished by Eugene Weinberger, violinist, and Mrs. R. V. Myers, pianist.

Miss Elizabeth Hainer was in charge of the program, and she spoke on "Fifty Years of Fellowships In the A. A. U. W." Representing international students who had received such fellowship were Miss Olive Scott and Miss Edith Ross. Wearing costumes typical of the countries they represented, Miss Scott spoke for the first graduate woman physician of Mexico, and Miss Ross told of the experience in this country of an Hungarian woman, who is an associate professor at one of the leading universities in that country.

Members who served as hostesses for the day were: Mrs. H. E. Baer, Mrs. G. M. Colby, social chairman, Mrs. P. M. Eliot, Mrs. J. H. Gongwer, Miss Virginia Howard, Miss Frances Randall, Mrs. E. C. Mast, Mrs. V. A. Simpson, Miss Angeline Shaneff, Miss Mary Ward, Mrs. R. M. Calene, Miss Elsie McFadden and Mrs. B. F. Parr.

The next regular meeting will be held Nov. 5 at the John Simpson junior high school cafeteria at 6:15 p. m. A program sponsored by the P. T. A. council on Better Movies will be attended at 7:30 by the association. Members of group three will serve as hostesses.

New members and guests present included: Miss Helen Hartman, Mrs. Clifford Faust, Mrs. M. W. Wappner, Mrs. Wm. J. Rusk, Mrs. H. F. Plaut, Mrs. Perry Cook, Miss Dorothy Corigan, Mrs. Robert Zeller, Mrs. R. R. Crawford, Mrs. R. Cruickshank, Mrs. William Powell, Mrs. R. Riley, Mrs. Edwin Cooper, Mrs. E. S. Mann, Mrs. Charles Spence, Mrs. Grant Ward, Miss Lenore Mills, Miss Milloy, Miss Virginia Carbis and Miss Betty Jane Harner.

With MARIANNE

JUST NOW it seems that everyone is asking for a completely natural make-up—one so soft and subtle it almost seems to escape being a make-up at all. . . . Well, the new Rose Fumee is just such a make-up—grand for the country, for mornings in town and, in fact, for a neutral make-up to go with everything in a pinch. . . . It is youthful and glowing and universally becoming. . . . Then too, it is a perfect suggestion for young girls who are just learning to feel undressed without a lipstick. . . . With Rose Fumee, the lips are a misty coral pink and the rouge lends a soft, healthful glow to the cheeks.... To achieve the completely natural skin tone so essential to this make-up, the woman who manufactures it has created a new shade of powder—a warm tone she has named Rose Beige.

If you're looking for something in a casual little hat that you can tuck in a corner and pop onto your head in a minute, you'll find some of those now being shown in the downtown stores to be just the answer to your needs. . . . The new wrap-around turbans for fall have taken on extra body that has given them a distinctive touch. . . . Hi-hat effects have been created with wool padding and stiffening, and "la conga" style is the most popular. . . . These turbans come in wool jersey in all the warm autumn shades, and then there are velvet ones (in "la conga" mode too) of red, black and green.

While we're talking about accessories, I must be sure to tell you that there are many smart-looking purses on display in the local shops this week. . . . According to your own particular taste, you can get them in calf, real alligator, faille silk, suede and capeskin. The shades are brown, black, wine and green, the trim is generally ribbon, metal or rhinestone, and the shapes vary from triangular and pouch styles to long under-arm envelopes.

* * *

A NEW NOTE in costume jewelry is the use of enormous jewels—most as big as those in a maharajah's treasure chest. . . . While shopping yesterday I saw these sparkling diamond-like stones in clips, earrings, brooches and bracelets—and believe you me, one glance at the pretty things is enough to assure you that they'll do wonderful tricks for your winter clothes.

* * *

STAGGER THE STAG-LINE: That's exactly what you'll do if you wear the new "Lips," which a famous New York extract company has added to its line of cosmetics. . . . This lipstick seems to glide on—it's so smooth and creamy, it's not drying, is lightly perfumed—and best of all, stays on for hours. . . . It comes in five "stag-line" shades—Honey, a light autumn red tone. . . . Rascal Red, a bright medium red. . . . Dark Secret, a deep, rich red. . . . Heart Beat, a dark wine shade . . . and Natural, which changes with your own colorings.

* * *

NOW that the evenings are growing cooler and longer, you'll probably be spending more time indoors than you have for many months, and so if you're looking for something to do, you'll find needlepoint a pleasant pastime. . . . You can buy it now to be made into pictures or in sizes for chairs, footstools, benches and even double chair seats and backs. . . . There are floral, pictorial, scroll and nursery designs, and they come already worked, so that all you need do is fill in the solid colors.

* * *

You'll be able to keep perfect order in your dressing table or chest of drawers if you have some of those quilted satin accessory boxes to help you out. . . . Now there are combination boxes for hosiery and hankies, and the newest thing is a jewel box with a quilted lid and soft, cream-colored velvet lining.

* * *

NOT to be outdone by their feminine partners, who have been sporting patriotic jewelry for some time, the men also have some. . . . Now in the men's shops this week are tie bars decorated with enameled American flags or airplanes in red, white and blue.... Tiny American flags to decorate suit lapels also are being shown, and key chains too are being decorated with this emblem. . . . There are cuff links of this style as well as red and blue crystal ones.

* * *

FOR YOUR PIN MONEY: Something new in coin banks are the crystal ones which look like large flower bowls. . . . They really will hold quite a fortune—and the advantage is that you can see it while it's amassing. . . . Oh yes, and another scoring point is that you don't have to break it to get the money out—it can be opened at the bottom—but of course that doesn't mean you can snitch in a pinch!

SCHEDULE SESSION.

The Women's Society of Christian Service of the Central Methodist church will meet at 11 a. m. tomorrow for a business meeting to be followed by luncheon and a program.

Nursery Rhymes Subject of Paper At Opening Meet

For the opening meeting of the season a 1 o'clock luncheon was served to members of the Tourist club at two long tables yesterday with Mrs. Harry Bowers and Mrs. B. W. Forkner as hostesses. The club colors of lavender and white were carried out in the floral decorations. Mrs. C. V. Gates presented the program "Historic Origin of Nursery Rhymes."

She presented Peggy Brooks who, attired as Mother Goose, sang some of the rhymes. Then Mrs. Gates conducted a nursery rhyme contest, and winners were Mrs. R. F. Miller and Mrs. O. L. Seybold.

Mrs. H. D. Hoover and Mrs. M. W. Wappner were named to serve on the Dental clinic board this year, and Mrs. Miller was appointed to attend the mill tax levy meeting at the municipal court tonight.

The next meeting will be held at 2:30 p. m. Oct. 15 in the home of Mrs. Grant Ward, 116 Stewart avenue.

Sorority Plans Two Ceremonies For New Pledges

Bridge was the diversion at a meeting of the Alpha Pi Sigma sorority yesterday evening at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. Prizes in the games were awarded to Mrs. Clarence Skinner and Mrs. Donald Hattman.

During the business session, which was conducted by Miss Isabel Gerstmeyer, president, plans were made for a rummage sale to be held on North Diamond street Oct. 18 and 19, with Miss Ann Hager in charge.

Informal initiation for the sorority's pledges will be an event of Oct. 15. Miss Marie Kalbfleisch, Mrs. Raymond Beal and Miss Ann Menrath will make arrangements for that affair. Formal initiation ceremonies will be held at Wickliffe Manor on Oct. 29, when dinner will be served at 6:30 o'clock. Miss Grace Crotty, Mrs. Hattman and Mrs. C. R. Martin will be the hostesses at that time.

Class Celebrates Several Birthdays

Members of the Rain or Shine class of the South Main Street Evangelical church who have birthdays in September met for their annual birthday party yesterday at the home of Mrs. Arthur Eckert, 299 South Main street. Mrs. R. C. Campbell was the associate hostess. Luncheon was served at a long table centered with fall flowers, and a birthday cake, and the places of the guests were marked with individual corsages.

Mrs. Emma Berry, Rev. C. L. Kern and his son, David, were the guests. In addition to the hostesses, those whose birthdays were observed included Mrs. C. M. Hunter, Mrs. Lee Harley, Mrs. Clyde Baker, Mrs. Della Berry and Mrs. W. G. Brickley.

A gift exchange followed the business session, and prizes in the contests were won by Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Hunter. The meeting next year will be with Mrs. Brickley.

Cards In Play During C. L. of C. Session

Card games were played at 12 tables yesterday evening when members of the C. L. of C. met at their club rooms in the Bird building. Prizes in bridge were won by Mrs. George Stuhldreher and Mrs. Vincent Montgomery, while Mrs. Newton DeWeese and Mrs. M. M. Vogel were recipients of the five hundred awards. Mrs. Joseph Zimmerman also won a prize.

Mrs. Herman Weiland and Mrs. Frank Westrick were hostesses for the evening, and they served refreshments at small tables decorated with bouquets of garden flowers. There will be a routine business session at the club rooms on Oct. 15.

ENTERTAIN CLUB.

Mrs. Robert Barker was hostess for a meeting of the Audubon club yesterday at her home, 49 Grover avenue, and Mrs. V. P. Sparks was a guest for the day. During the program Mrs. Emery Smith discussed "Color In Nature," and Mrs. Ralph Race presented a paper on the thistle. Mrs. Van Cook has invited the group to her home on Sherman avenue for the next meeting, Nov. 5.

Women's Group Hears Review Of English Novel

The first in the series of three book reviews to be given this fall and early winter by Mrs. W. E. Benninghoff, Cleveland, was presented yesterday in the auditorium of the First Congregational church under the auspices of the Women's association. She reviewed "The English Air" by Stevenson. Mrs. Charles Fox introduced the speaker.

The book deals with the experiences of a young half-German half-English youth, Franz von Hayden, who goes to England to visit his British cousins, Sophie, Wynn and Roy at their country estate. While there he is supposed to report to his Nazi father of the reactions of the British people to the European situation.

But in the interval of his stay he falls in love with Wynn, and becomes considerably like his English cousins. When he returns to Germany he joins with a radio crew sponsored by an organization trying to uproot Naziism, and is later returned to England to raise funds. Here he re-contacts his cousins, and tells them he is going to Finland to help fight against Germany, but not before he and Wynn have an "understanding."

Mrs. Benninghoff pointed out that this book is a forerunner of the type of book which will flood the winter fictional market—novels dealing with the present European war.

The Women's association will have a luncheon tomorrow at the church when Mrs. Harold E. Andrews, Ashland college, serves as guest speaker. Mrs. Tom Ford is chairman of the hostess committee.

Mrs. Benninghoff will return on Nov. 5 for her next review which will deal with the novel "Mrs. Miniver" by Jan Struthers.

Mrs. Layton Has Program at Circle

A Swedish smorgasbord was served yesterday to members of the Bethany circle of the First Presbyterian church when Mrs. D. O. Meese, 591 Woodland road, opened her home. Mrs. Charles A. Kuntz was the chairman, and the assisting hostesses were Mrs. L. W. Birch, Mrs. Robert Burns, Mrs. E. H. Brown, Mrs. George Gaalaas, Mrs. Carl Gibson, Mrs. W. P. Lyttle, Mrs. Rufus King and Mrs. Ray Painter.

Miss Belle Anderson, who has been treasurer of the circle since 1925, and who is leaving soon to make her home in California, was presented with a gift. Mrs. L. B. McCullough was elected to the treasurer's post.

The program was a review of "Wind, Sand and Stars" by Antoine d'Saint Exupery given by Mrs. William Layton. The next meeting will be a Dutch luncheon at 1 p. m. Nov. 12 with Mrs. W. B. Ford, 513 Chevy Chase road.

INITIAL SESSION OF SOROSIS CONDUCTED

Mrs. C. A. McClure Gives First Program on Netherlands; Miss Anna Proctor Entertains Group.

THE FIRST MEETING of the year was held at 2:30 p. m. yesterday by members of the Mansfield Sorosis when Miss Anna Proctor entertained 24 at the Women's Club. Mrs. LeRoy McGinty, program chairman, explained the program for the coming year, and Mrs. W. R. King, president, gave a word of greeting.

Mrs. C. A. McClure had the program on the "History and Geography of the Netherlands." She explained that the history of the country was that of the cause of freedom, and that Holland had become a great nation of Europe through the perseverance of her people.

She described the Netherlands people as a seafaring race active in trade and establishing colonies, and told of the influence other nations had had on the development of the country. She told her audience that the Netherlands is one-third the area of Ohio.

The roll call response was "summer memories." Mrs. Vernon Fairley, Hillsboro, was a guest. The next meeting will be held Oct. 15 at 7:30 p. m. at the Club with Mrs. W. E. Wygant as hostess.

Miss Mathias Wears Gown of Sister-In-Law for Wedding

WEARING the wedding gown that her sister-in-law, Mrs. Bernard Mathias, wore for her marriage just a year ago September, Miss Marcella May Mathias, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Mathias, 1645 Country Club drive, became the bride of Paul James Cook, son of Rev. and Mrs. James E. Cook of Dallas Center, Ia., at 8 o'clock Monday evening.

The bridegroom's father performed the ceremony before the altar of the United Brethren church. Organ nuptials included "I Love You Truly," "Indian Love Call," "Oh Promise Me" and the traditional wedding marches by Wagner and Mendelssohn. The altar of the church was decorated with palms, beauty baskets of autumn flowers and 18 white tapers.

The bride's gown of white satin was fashioned with a long train, leg-o-mutton sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. Her finger-tip veil and gown were trimmed with tiny pearls. She carried a Bible covered with white satin and an orchid.

Mrs. Bernard Mathias and Miss Wanda Yarkam of Akron were the bridesmaids. Mrs. Mildred Mathias, sister-in-law of the bride, was the matron of honor, and Margo Mathias, the bride's niece, was the flower girl. All of the attendants were attired in net gowns of varrying pastel shades of blue, pink, chartreuse and peach, and they carried bouquets of gladioli and roses in shades to blend with their gowns. Jack Turner was the best man, and the ushers were the bride's brother, Bernard Mathias, and William Bringham.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held for 60 guests at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Cook now are taking a wedding trip and after Oct. 8 they will reside at 326 West Sixth street. For traveling the bride wore a black and red ensemble with black accessories.

Mrs. Cook is a graduate of Mansfield Senior high school and an employe of the S. S. Kresge company. Mr. Cook was graduated from high school in Flora, Ind., and he attended Ashland college. Now he is employed at the Bazley market.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, Oct. 3.

Despite some very excellent prospects and promises for success and accomplishment there may be several difficult situations and tenacious obstacles to cope with, judging by the conflicting force of important planets. Matters seem to be imbued with forces pulling two ways and vigorously, with expansive and ambitious projects hampered and restricted by stubborn opposition, limitation and selfish interests. But under shrewd and sagacious effort and with the support and sympathy of those in power there may be brilliant achievements.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year in which really great attainments and brilliant success may have to be wrested from a set of contradictory and thwarting influences. While there are expansive and ambitious objectives in sight yet there are tenacious obstacles, perhaps delays and sinister antagonism to cope with. But under shrewd manipulation and with the assured cooperation of those in prestige and influence there should be ultimate victory, together with much personal gratification.

HONORED.

Henry Berg, jr., was honored last night in celebration of his 18th birthday anniversary at his home. Games were played, and refreshments served and the guest of honor was presented with a gift.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"I am sorry, but that arrangement is impossible."

I could have gone on and explained, but I was so annoyed at him that I perversely gave him the opportunity for another question which he promptly seized.

"Why?" The monosyllable evidently was intended to be a missile, but it whizzed harmlessly past me.

"Because." I explained elaborately, "Edith Fairfax is very ill, requiring the constant care of a nurse, and in so nervous a condition that solitude is vitally necessary for her. I have turned that room over to her, and her nurse, Miss Whitlock."

"And there is no other room near here?"

"None where they would be as safe as they will be here."

He opened his lips for a further protest but I forestalled him with what I malevolently guessed would be an effectual stopper to his vial of wrath.

"Would you like to see Queen Olga before you go to my father?" I asked.

"Oh! No no," he said stridently. "I—I—cannot—must not—see her. She must not know that I am here—at least until I know the result of my coming interview with —with—your father"

I am afraid I stared at him blankly for the infinitesimal fraction of time it took me to recover from the astonishment his unusual demeanor had aroused in me. To me his fear of seeing Olga was inexplicable. His arrogance in demanding better arrangements for her was perfectly understandable —and familiar. Times without number I had seen him act in exactly that manner. But this sudden deflation, this humble appeal, this stark panic, were beyond my ken

His imperious concern for his royal fiancee's proper housing had been only a flash in the pan. I realized that as I observed his beaten aspect, almost as though he had received actual physical chastisement, and his unmistakable terror of having Queen Olga discover that he was to be domiciled in the farmhouse.

"Unless you wish it," I said, "there is no reason why either Queen Olga or her daughter should know of your presence here. You can have your meals served in your room and thus avoid the necessity of meeting them in the dining room. Except for meals, they are keeping strictly to their own rooms, at my father's request."

"It isn't that I don't want to see them," he said nervously "God knows—" he left the rest of that sentence suspended in air, started on another one

"I can't tell anything of what I want to do" he said—or, rather, stammered, "until I have seen your father"

"He is waiting to see you." I told him "In fact, he asked me to bring you to him as soon as you came in"

"That is what I am here for," he said with dignity. "Will you please take me to your father?"

"Mervyn LeRoy, who was sponsoring me at Metro, had a musical scheduled," he says. "I didn't fit in, and Mervyn was frank in telling me I'd be better off to go on my own. They transferred my contract to Hal Roach, who changed my name to John—it's really Jack—Hubbard, and put me to work. We just finished 'Road Show' there, and he's loaned me to Republic for this one. . . ."

The story of Anthony Allen isn't sad. Jack Hubbard, son of a big steel executive in East Chicago, always wanted to be an actor. His dad scowled, but when he was 18 Jack issued his declaration of independence. In four years at the Goodman theater in Chicago he did at least 100 plays, finally made a booster of his dad and wound up in Hollywood.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE NEAREST TO SET UP

In studying your own hand and dummy prior to beginning play for a suit contract, it is well to consider which of the two holdings is the nearest to set up. If it is the dummy you intend to try to establish, using your own hand to ruff out dummy's losers and try to establish dummy's suit by ruffing it up, you are likely to require a fair number of entries into the dummy. In that event, you must try to preserve the requisite number of entries there, using up your own high cards before those of the dummy

	♠ J 10 6 ♥ A 2 ♦ A K J 9 8 7 ♣ K 3

Interesting bidding, that, although rather funny South had signed off the side by passing his partner's free raise, but after West reopened it and North saw fit to bid 3-Spades. South felt stronger and went the rest of the way. Logical, to an extent

West simplified part of the problem by laying down the spade A and K, then switched to his club Q. A careless player might have taken that with the K, seeing he could next cash the A and then ruff a couple of clubs, but that would have done no good if two more tricks were lost, one of them to the spade Q and the other a heart trick The heart loser had to be prevented, which could be done only by setting up diamonds. The bids of two other suits by West marked East with diamond length, and therefore a number of entries might be needed to bring in that suit.

South therefore decided to leave the club K in dummy as a valuable entry and took the first trick with his club A. Good thing he did Two high diamonds were followed by the 7 to the 10 and a ruff, then the club 10 to the K, East ruffing with the spade Q. He returned the heart 3 to the 9 and A. The diamond 8 was covered by the Q and ruffed, establishing the suit. A club ruffed by the spade J formed an entry to take two diamonds and discard a club and a heart, the last two tricks being South's trumps.

Tomorrow's Problem.

News Is Where You Find It---

TODAY all over America millions of words will be written . . . on folded yellow sheets of paper, on the backs of old envelopes, on telephone pads, on typewriters . . . millions of words will be written and termed news; for news is where you find it.

News: "fresh tidings," Noah Webster said: but however you define it, it is a thing of vital importance to the American way of life. It is that something that has made this a nation of intelligent people; it is the thing that has made a reality of Jefferson's dream of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." News makes life worth living.

When life begins—when a baby is born—that's news. It's news when Tommy wins the Mansfield soap box derby, when Dad gives Mary's hand in marriage, when Mother is president of the Literary Society, when Dad retires—news is life, and life is news.

News is the thing that caused Gutenberg to invent movable type — it made possible Ben Franklin's rise as a great American; it was the force that propelled Joseph Pulitzer to leadership, caused Horace Greeley to urge young men to "go west"; it has been the foundation of careers for Presidents, statesmen, leaders of business. News makes great things greater.

Behind mechanical Goliaths that turn out sheet after sheet of paper covered with printer's ink is one motivating force—news. Pressmen sweat, nimble fingers fly over linotype keys, typewriters are pounded in noisy staccato, notes are scrawled, telephones jangle, reporters race from fire to crime wave—all this for the sake of news. For news is where you find it, and once it's found it must be reported: men must act.

But to us who are Americans today, news has a much greater definition than the excitement of unusual events. We know that the freedom of the press is an American heritage and one that must be preserved if we are to continue as a democracy. We know that the duty of a free press is to carry unbiased reports of all events to a people who have learned to depend on informative news. We know that if we are to remain a free people, news must be held above the control of individuals seeking to destroy the freedom of a nation.

We, the people, must demand this, and we, the press, must do everything within our power to maintain this right.

This week is National Newspaper Week. It is not a week to be set apart, but one to mark the beginning of a new recognition of the power of the press: the power of freely written news to preserve our democracy. The Mansfield News-Journal joins with newspapers throughout the United States in pledging its determination to maintain these principles.

COUNCIL OK'S IMPROVEMENTS ON 4 STREETS

Passes First Legislation To Grade and Gravel Streets, Install New Sewers.

Preliminary legislation authorizing improvements on four streets was approved by city council at its September meeting last night.

The projected work includes the grading and graveling of Marlow road and the construction of sanitary sewers on sections of Parkview and Poplar streets and Lawnsdale avenue.

Final approval of the projects will probably be given at the October meeting.

Council in its brief session also granted T. R. Sammons Outdoor Advertising company permission to erect billboards on two pieces of city property

The firm was given the privilege of constructing one of the signs on a tract of ground just east of the Park avenue east subway at Oak street, and the other on Ashland road at the northeast corner of a municipal playground. The rental fee for both properties was fixed at $30 annually.

A claim for $3,378 filed by R. J. Welsh, 641 Davis road, for damages he claims resulted from an opening in the street last winter was ordered filed on a motion submitted by Fred Miller, chairman of the finance committee.

A petition from residents in the vicinity of Park avenue east and Diamond and Franklin avenue protesting against smoke nuisance in the neighborhood was referred to a special committee consisting of George Kyle, Arthur L. Croak and Harry Emmons.

NO STRINGS

Streamline Bean Feature of 1940 Vegetable Crop.

AMES, Ia.—(INS)—The 1940 vegetable crop is estreamlined. Horticulturists have brought out a "new and different" crop of vegetables this year.

Leading the 1940 vegetable fashions, is the green bean "with no strings attached." Long and slender, the new snap bean makes preparation easy and does away with that string pulling at the dinner table.

The carrots have come out with a streamlined model which makes less scraping and waste. The 1940 carrots have rounded tops and smooth tapering sides. In addition, there is less core which makes them better to eat.

Even the cucumber has gained economic glamour with a "less-pointed" model which wield more slices at the ends.

Celery has been rejuvenated with the horticulturists coming out with a new variety with less stringy fiber.

Salesman's Talk Delays Council Meeting Half Hour

Although city council's sessions are scheduled to get under way promptly at 8 p. m. it was along toward nine before legislators got into any official business last night.

Convening late, council was further delayed when a salesman took nearly half an hour of their time to display a new-type water pipe to the legislators.

C. E. Runyan, a representative of a Cleveland firm, produced samples of the pipe and talked at length concerning its manufacture and benefits derived from its use in place of the cast iron mains now used in the city.

Ordinarily, discussions of this type are taken up with the city engineer or the board of control which makes the purchases, but Howard G. Miller, president of council, said the salesman had been invited to speak at the request of Councilman C. N. Shultz, chairman of the water committee.

Shultz's only comment was that the representative had asked for five minutes to display his products.

King of Swat Fools Fans By Fanning

Perhaps Babe Ruth missed this one purposely to entertain the 2,500 youthful fans gathered at the New York World's Fair Academy of Sport for the final session of the baseball school. At any rate, the Bambino proved the major attraction as the former home run king showed the boys how to hit long ones. The boy behind the plate, Stephen Forman, 12, was mighty surprised when he opened his eyes and found the ball in his mitt.

ORDERS BALLOTS

Election Board Buys 45,000 For Fall Election.

An order for the printing of Richland county's election ballots had been placed today, and the ballots are expected to be ready for the boards of elections by Monday.

The Mansfield Printing company received the contract to print approximately 45,000 ballots, including the presidential ballot, which is separate from the state and county ballot for the first time. There will be several local issue ballots.

Registration closes Monday night for the Nov. 5 elections. George Balliet, president of the board of elections, said today that the office of the board in the county building will remain open until 9 p. m. on Friday, Saturday and Monday.

RIVAL BROTHERS

DES MOINES, Ia.—(INS)—Iowa's rival candidates for governor are fraternity brothers. Both Gov. George A. Wilson, Republican, and John Valentine, Democrat, are members of Sigma Chi fraternity.

CITY COUNCIL DECIDES TO BUY $2,500 BOOKKEEPING MACHINE

The office of the city water and sewer department is going to get a new bookkeeping machine. It's going to cost $2,500.

City council approved the purchase of the equipment last night by authorizing the appropriation, earmarking $1,250 in the water works surplus fund and a similiar amount in the sewer department fund.

C. N. Schultz, chairman of council's water committee, told the legislators that the present equipment in the department office was worn out and that the machine was badly needed.

He said, however, that it would be probably three months before equipment could be delivered since it had to be specially built to conform with ledger cards used in the office.

The legislation authorized Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton to advertise for bids for the purchase. No provisions were made for disposing of the equipment now in use.

In addition, council also approved seven transfers of funds totalling $5,354 to provide for additional expenditures in the water department and municipal court.

City Auditor Paul L. Kelley pointed out an appropriation of $350 approved for the street department was made necessary because the state highway department had declined to assume any incidental expense on the Fourth street paving project.

He said council had appropriated $29,000 to finance the city's share of the cost and although the state had let the contract for less than estimates that they refused to stand the additional expense.

THEATERS

Unusual Musical Fantasy.

A 28-piece orchestra made entirely of clay figures, with fruit heads and instruments, was the unusual and difficult set constructed for a musical novelty scene in "Strike Up the Band," showing at the Ohio. Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland are co-starred in this hilarious comedy. Pianists, violinists and drummers, all are made to move as though actually playing their instruments. It took a staff of 22 men more than a month to build the set, then an additional two weeks were required to learn to operate the figures in time with the music.

Showing at the Ritz are "My Love Came Back," starring Olivia deHavilland, Jeffrey Lynn and Eddie Albert, and "Those Were the Days" with William Holden, Bonita Granville, Ezra Stone and Judith Barrett. The latter picture is based on George Fitch's Saturday Evepost yarns about the Old Siwash, not a legendary campus but actually Knox college at Galesburg, Ill.

Peter Lorre In Title Role.

Famed for his brilliant, sensitive characterizations of more or less eccentric mysterious people, Peter Lorre has one of the most unique roles of his colorful career in "Stranger on the Third Floor," the film at the Madison. He plays the title role in this drama, that of a man of mystery who turns out to be a homicidal maniac and whose murderous impulses involve a newspaper reporter and his sweetheart in a harrowing chain of events. The co-feature is "River's End,", featuring Dennis Morgan.

Three Mesquiteers Return.

The three mesquiteers in "Pals of the Saddle," featuring John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune, are to be seen at the Park theater, beginning Thursday. The story deals with the attempts of a syndicate of foreign munitions interest to wrest "Monium" from the desert. Since "Monium" is a new chemical indispensable in the manufacture of modern explosives, the situation becomes one of the international menace. The co-feature is "Babies For Sale," starring Rochelle Hudson and Glenn Ford.

ON ARMY JOB

Mansfield Reservist Called By Ordnance Division.

Ben Rawls, 418 Sherman place, was in Washington, D. C., today in response to army orders to report for duty to the chief of ordnance of the war department for at least a year's service.

A member of the army officers reserve corps, Rawls received special training last summer. He expects to be stationed in Washington during the year and possibly longer. He will be joined there in two weeks by Mrs. Rawls.

Rawls has been employed by the Ohio Brass company from which he has been given a leave of absence. He left Mansfield Tuesday.

OHIO SOLDIERS TO KEEP WARM

'Go South For Winter' In Training at Camp Shelby, Miss.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—When icy winds whip snowdrifts in Ohio and the thermometer flirts with zero, 10,500 Buckeye national guardsmen will be sojourning among the pines of a southern winter resort area—at Camp Shelby, Miss.

The guardsmen depart soon after Oct. 16 to begin a year's military training.

The section retains much of the flavor of the old south: Great plantations, sub-tropic crops, sandy soil, more than 120,000 acres of forests, and an average temperature of 51 in the winter and 81 in the summer.

Camp Shelby itself is a 5,100 acre area, 12 miles south of Hattiesburg (population 22,000), 65 miles north of the Gulf of Mexico, 130 miles from New Orleans and 600 miles from Columbus

The country is low, rolling, heavily wooded and criss-crossed by creeks and small rivers. Near the camp is the De Coto national forest.

During the World war Camp Shelby was the training ground for 36,000 men from the Indiana, West Virginia and Kentucky national guards. Six years ago Mississippi took over the site for its national guard, erected permanent buildings and installed underground water and light systems. The federal government now is expanding the facilities.

The Hattiesburg chamber of commerce boasts that the Camp Shelby health record was the best among divisional camps in the World war.

The coastal towns of Gulfport, Biloxi, Pascagoula and numerous others are considered ideal winter resorts.

Ohio Fuel Gas Scores Again In Industrial Safety

Winning of first honors in the National Safety Council's public utility industrial safety contest by the Ohio Fuel Gas company for the third consecutive year, was announced today by William C. Mead, the company's superintendent of the Mansfield district.

Competition is based on the frequency rating of the number of time-loss accidents per million hours worked during the period of one year from July 1, 1939 to June 30, 1940. The Ohio Fuel company scored the lowest frequency rate in its classification. This represented, for the whole company, only 11 time-loss accidents in over six million hours worked.

The last disabling accident in the Mansfield district, Mead said, was on June 8, 1936. Since then this district has had over a million and a quarter man hours.

A bronze trophy will be presented to representatives of the company at the National Safety Council to be held in Chicago later this month, Mead said.

ODD TICKETS.

PHILADELPHIA —(U.P.)— Two playing cards which were issued as "tickets" to medical school lectures in 1790 were exhibited to bicentennial visitors at the University of Pennsylvania. Longhand inscriptions on the reverse sides show that the cards were "tickets" to medical school lectures by Dr. James Woodhouse Clements back in 1790.
